Drapeau Eyeing 1984 Olympics

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau says Montreal might seek the 1984 Olympic Games if the International Olympic Committee (IOC) should decide to turn down a bid by Los Angeles.

"I wouldn't want anyone to think that Los Angeles is not a proper candidate for the games," Drapeau said Sunday in a television interview.

"But if, after it meets in April to examine the Los Angeles dossier, the IOC decides to extend the bidding period, not only Montreal, but all interested cities could bid for the games."

Drapeau said he could "hardly be against the idea of having the games here twice" since he had spent 13 years promoting Montreal's candidacy for the 1976 Games.

He said the 1984 Games would be a "most profitable venture" for Montreal, since the city already has the facilities. It would take as little as three years to organize the games here.

But he pointed out that Los Angeles — the only city being considered for the 1984 Games — is well prepared for the event since it already has a stadium. Montreal had to build a stadium at a cost of $900 million.

The mayor added that Los Angeles will also have the advantage of being allowed to house athletes in university dormitories, while Montreal was required by the IOC to build special living quarters. These now are being converted into apartments.

Snowstorms Again Batter Eastern U.S.

Times News Services

NEW YORK — A wind-driven snowstorm hit the middle Atlantic and Northeast United States today, closing schools, slowing traffic to a crawl and disrupting life for millions. The storm was the second for the area in 17 days.

The snow began during the night and as much as 15 centimetres was piled up in some areas by the middle of the morning.

Accumulations of up to 50 centimetres were predicted for parts of the region, with winds of 65 kilometres (40 miles) an hour and higher gusts creating hazardous drifts.

Court and legislative sessions were cancelled; airport runways were blocked; schools and some public offices and businesses were closed. Roads generally were reported passable but slippery during the morning. Authorities lowered speed limits and urged people to avoid driving if at all possible.

Commuter trains and buses bringing hundreds of thousands of workers to Manhattan from Long Island and suburbs in Westchester County, Connecticut and New Jersey reported serious delays. In Boston, the peak snowfall was expected to coincide with the evening rush hour and officials said they might ask businesses to send people home early.

Meanwhile, a Pacific storm drenched Southern California and at least five persons died in traffic accidents caused by rain and mudslides. Forecasters predicted further showers through the week.

Two low-pressure systems — one off the Carolina coast, the other in the Appalachians — were blamed for the snow in the East. Unlike the January storm, the current round of snow was predicted in advance and authorities took precautions. The New York City sanitation department put 1,250 men on the streets — 10 times the number normally on duty each day — but a spokesman said the new storm would "be a rough one to fight" because equipment is in bad shape.

By 10 a.m., up to 15 centimetres of snow had fallen in the New York metropolitan

Chronically Sick Won't be Billed

Chronically ill patients who occupy acute-care beds will not be forced to pay their own bills, a ministry of health official said today.

Reports from the Vancouver General Hospital to this effect were incorrect, said Dr. Chapin Key, executive director of health programs.

Jim Fair, administrator of the Victoria General Hospital, said at the rate of $149 per day, about $200,000 has been paid by the provincial government to cover unpaid bills in 1976.

He said the hospital's social services department becomes involved at an early stage when it becomes apparent that a patient will have difficulty finding accommodation.

"It would be immoral, irresponsible and detrimental to their future existence," Fair said, to worry patients and relatives who cannot afford to pay.

He said some provinces, like Ontario, make municipalities financially responsible in such situations.

Dr. A.C. Pickles, administrator of the Royal Jubilee Hospital, said the provincial grant given to cover unpaid bills in 1976 amounted to more than $327,000.

"The extension of the long-term care program on Jan. 1 has meant that there are more people on the waiting list," he said.

While notification of cut-off has been in effect for at least 10 or 11 years, Pickles said it is always a traumatic experience for patients and their families when they are told they are legally responsible

Developer To Go Ahead

The huge Kingsview Properties housing development near Duncan has been delayed but will go ahead "quite soon," a company spokesman said today.

Syd Welsh, board chairman of Premier Cablevision and a director of Kingsview, said a delay was necessary but the 1,200-lot housing project will go ahead.

"We have too much invested to abandon the project," he said. "It will be completed, there is no question about it."

He said Kingsview will complete the project within the terms of its land use contract with North Cowichan which does not expire until 1982.

Work on installing services to the 1,200 lots began in 1974 but was halted in November, 1977, when it was about 95 per cent completed.

The project is to include up to 200 townhouses and apartment units as well as 1,200 single-family homes.

It is believed that a weak real estate market in the Duncan area was a factor in the delay.

North Cowichan administrator John Berikoff today said the municipality is confi-

Rusty Autos To Be Named

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will publish the names of automobiles that rust the fastest in a series of advertisements next fall, says Don Murphy of Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada.

He said the campaign will give the names of automobile models that do not comply with a federal anti-corrosion code announced last month.

The code requires 1978 automobiles to remain free of surface rust for one year and from rust holes in the body for three years. The time limits for rust will be increased, beginning with 1981 models, to 18 months and five years, respectively.

Murphy said rust information will come from consumer complaints and monitoring programs in Toronto and Montreal by the Canadian Automobile Association.

"In mid-April, we'll be advertising for owners of 1978 cars whose automobiles have gone through a full winter and experienced rust problems to let us know," said Murphy.

'N-Satellite Hole' Proves to be Empty

EDMONTON (CP) — There is nothing lying under a debris-filled crater in the ice of the Thelon River, thought to be caused by a falling nuclear-powered Soviet satellite two weeks ago.

A press briefing at Canadian Forces Base Namao was told today that recovery teams have removed several pieces of tubing from the three-metre wide crater but there was nothing under the ice.

Geoff Knight of the Atomic Energy Control Board of Canada said the pieces of tubing were obviously not large enough to have created the large crater on the river but officials can only speculate as to what may have caused the impact point.

He declined to say what the speculation is but the lack of any findings below the ice make it more important for officials to check out a half-dozen other sources of radioactivity.

Sadat, Carter Pledge Efforts

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Carter and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat have agreed to make "unremitting efforts" to facilitate resumption of direct peace talks between Israel and Egypt.

In a statement issued Sunday at the end of two days of talks, the two leaders said U.S. Assistant State Secretary Alfred Atherton would shuttle between Cairo and Jerusalem to work toward a "declaration of principles" on a settlement between the two countries.

The Carter administration hopes such a declaration can overcome the talks' present impasse over the Palestinian question and the future of the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

Egypt withdrew its foreign minister from the talks shortly after they opened in Jerusalem, accusing Israel of intransigence and an inflexible bargaining stance. The two countries have since resumed parallel security talks on questions surrounding an Israeli pullback from the Sinai desert.

Sadat was sombre as he answered questions on what appeared to have been a difficult series of meetings with Carter at Camp David, the presidential retreat in the Maryland mountains.

NO DATE SLATED FOR TEL'S RETURN

Negotiators for the British Columbia Telephone Co. and the Telecommunications Workers Union entered the fourth day of talks today on a back-to-work agreement to end their 75-day strike-lockout.

Doug Booth, union vice-president, said Sunday in Vancouver that talks were going slowly and he could not estimate when the agreement would be signed.

Company spokesman Keith Matthews said it was unfair to suggest talks were going slowly because federal mediator Mike Collins had never applied a time element to them. Matthews also said there should be no speculation about the possible date for a return to work.

Jobless Plan Line Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Downtown Eastside Residents' Association is calling for thousands of unemployed people in Vancouver to apply for job openings at the same place and time in order to demonstrate the severity of Canada's unemployment situation.

In a letter to British Columbia and Canadian labor organizations, association president Bruce Eriksen suggests that several thousand unemployed people in Vancouver go to city hall and demand interviews for any job posted or leave their names and addresses for potential employment.

The plan would put pressure on the federal and provincial governments to provide jobs, Eriksen said in an interview Friday.

The action could be done on a daily basis by applying at any Vancouver firm which advertises job vacancies, he said.

"We have to make the unemployed visible and I don't see any better way to do so," he said.

Canadians Didn't Want Job

An American was hired as new president of the Insurance Corp. of British Columbia because there is a lack of suitable executives in Canada, the minister responsible for the Crown corporation said Sunday.

Pat McGeer said that although the consulting firm Price Waterhouse made a thorough search for a Canadian, Canada does not have many large insurance companies with executives with the necessary experience.

Canadians who were approached were not interested, he added.

McGeer announced Jan. 25 that Robbie Sherrell had been chosen president, to start March 1. Sherrell now works in London, England.

He reiterated Sunday that immigration problems will not prevent Sherrell from starting as scheduled.

McGeer agreed that ICBC did not list the job opening with Canada Manpower until after Sherrell had been hired at a salary of $80,000 a year, but said he does not think the regulation should apply to top executive positions.

Immigration officials have said they want ICBC to prove that it was unable to hire a Canadian for the job, and have said Sherrell will not get a work permit without such proof.

The Victoria chapter of the Committee for an Independent Canada, meanwhile, has thrown its support behind federal immigration authorities in the Sherrell case.

The CIC group also sent a letter to McGeer stating that by appointing Sherrell to the ICBC post the minister has broken a federal law.

Cahill said a regulation passed last year makes it illegal for a foreigner to be appointed to a position in Canada as long as there is a Canadian available for the job.

PM Tests Political Waters

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, in his two-day swing through the British Columbia Interior, lost no opportunity for testing the political waters.

Some observers were left wondering whether the tour presaged a federal election this spring, despite bad publicity for the government of the Francis Fox affair.

Environment Minister Len Marchand was at the community of Williams Lake on Friday, arriving by a government jetliner, to greet Trudeau. For a time, two of the sleek little jetliners sat at the little airport before Marchand's returned empty to Ottawa.

Trudeau's only substantive speech came in Prince George on Thursday, when he told a receptive audience of about 1,000 that things are not as bad as they look for the country's economy. The economy is not collapsing, and all it takes is faith to realize there are opportunities in the current slowdown, he said.

Earlier, Sport Minister Iona Campagnolo and Justice Minister Ron Basford got into the act, accompanying Trudeau to Prince George welcoming ceremonies for the B.C. winter games.

And Liberal MP Jack Pearsall (Coast Chilcotin) was on hand to introduce the prime minister when he talked to about 300 residents of Williams Lake, praising them for their community spirit and recommending it as an example for the rest of the country.

But it took a Penticton high school student to put the question about when the next federal election, widely expected later this year, will actually come.

The prime minister first pretended annoyance that everyone asked when there will be an election, then said he did not know.

"Normally . . . there would be an election this spring," he added. "But there has been no decision made to have one yet."

Even when it is impossible for them to pay, they feel they are morally responsible, he said.

Key admitted that the government's new long-term program which began Jan. 1 is creating problems for acute-care hospitals. Because of the new service, facilities for patients who no longer qualify for acute care treatment have become scarce.

"We do realize it's creating more problems," Key said. "There is some difficulty. The long -term program is just getting off the ground and the hospitals are meeting some difficulty in admitting acute cases, selective surgery cases."

Key said when the homemaker program is "in full gear" patients occupying acute care beds will be able to go home.

Key said he checked with Vancouver General Hospital regarding a report Saturday that a new form letter had been circulated by the health ministry, stating that patients would have to pay the full acute care rate once their doctor has signified that they no longer require hospitalization.

He said no such letter has been circulated and that the cut-off forms have been in existence for several years.

area. Major roadways were under snow and ice, with gusting winds creating drifts. Nearly all schools in the New York City area were closed.

The city declared a limited snow emergency, limiting travel on key streets to cars with snow tires or chains. A snow emergency was declared for all parkways in Nassau and Suffolk counties on Long Island, limiting travel to only necessary vehicles.

Meanwhile, a storm which began in Saskatchewan on Saturday continued today and the weather office here said conditions are not expected to improve for several hours.

Winds gusted to 80 kilometres an hour Sunday. Gusts to 76 kilometres an hour were reported this morning but were expected to drop to about 30 kilometres an hour later today.

RCMP said roadblocks were set up at Swift Current and Maple Creek in the southwestern area of the province Sunday night to stop traffic until highways are cleared, probably later today.

THE OUTCASTS

SNOW PLOW PROTEST

COLOMA, Mich. (AP) — An employee of a company removing snow from South Bend, Ind., streets in the wake of a blizzard was shot and seriously wounded by a man who did not like the way his street was being plowed.

One of the residents of the street, Tommy Dent, exchanged words with John Frost, 38, of Coloma, an employee of Consumers Asphalt over the way snow — left over from the Jan. 26-27 blizzard — was being dumped in front of his house. After the exchange, police said, Dent went into the house, emerged with a pistol and shot Frost.

U.K. Indian Givers

ASH, England (CP) — Roughly about 250 years ago, the council of St. Nicholas's Church opened its purse and its heart and sent five pounds, five shillings and five pence to fire-stricken Montreal.

Now, hoping to raise several thousand pounds to refurbish its bells, St. Nicholas's is politely asking for its money back.

The church council in this town near the cathedral city of Canterbury, has checked its lists and found that it made several donations between 1707 and 1782, in response to appeals by the lord chancellor.

"Now we are just hoping these places will be prepared to pay back their debt of gratitude," says David Downes, council vice-president.

"By today's standards, the cash involved was very little, but if they multiply it by the rate of inflation for two centuries we shall be very happy."

The money sent to Montreal was in response to a lord chancellor's appeal to help the Canadian city rebuild after a major fire.

It was the largest sum ever donated by St. Nicholas.

Closer to home, St. George's Church, Littleport, near Cambridge, received four shillings and four pence in response to a 1707 appeal.

"We have already got a reply from St. George's. They sent us $5.22, which was not a bad rate of interest after all," Downes said.

The pound is worth about $2.15.

Unfortunately, the warm southerly winds will not only coax crocuses to bloom on the coast but continue to bring a series of mini disturbances from the Pacific. Unsettled weather will remain with periods of rain or showers with each system followed by partial clearing.

Ambulance Hijacked

NEW GLASGOW, N.S. (CP) — A man carrying a rifle hijacked an ambulance at the Aberdeen Hospital here today and headed toward Halifax holding the ambulance driver and a New Glasgow policeman at gunpoint.

A town police spokesman said the rifle-carrying man walked into the hospital and demanded a doctor and an ambulance to take him to the Victoria General Hospital in Halifax, 100 miles southwest of here.

The man disarmed a town police constable sent to investigate and took him with him, the police said, but dropped the demand for a doctor.

The police spokesman said the man was a former patient at both hospitals but checked out of the Aberdeen Hospital recently.

When the ambulance arrived at the Halifax hospital the man was disarmed and arrested by policemen dressed as hospital attendants.

TV Hype Also a Warranty

HIBBING, Minn. (AP) — A television commercial showing pickup trucks dashing over rough terrain and sailing through the air is as much a warranty as the paper an owner gets when he puts down his money, says a district county jury.

Steve Lastovitch, 24, sued Ford Motor Co. after his four-wheel-drive truck was dented during a rough trip through mud and sand. He contended that Ford should be required to pay $500 in repairs.

The jury's ruling in Lastovitch's favor last month said that commercials showing vehicles withstanding rough trips are, in effect, part of the vehicle's warranty.

William Thee, a Ford staff lawyer in Dearborn, Mich., had argued that the only warranty on vehicles is the "express warranty" given to buyers in writing at the time of purchase. He said Ford was disappointed with the jury's verdict and would consider an appeal.

Thee said Ford has no plans to change its television commercials.

Lastovich, who bought the truck for hunting trips in northern Minnesota, said his driving was mild compared with the workouts he had seen on television.

"In no way did I ever jump it through the air or race it over sand or across rocky terrain like they do in those television ads," said Lastovitch.

He contended the truck's suspension was "almost like a rubber band" and that the box of the truck slammed into the rear of the cab, denting it.

Montreal Police Abandon Patrols

MONTREAL (CP) — There were 27 armed robberies and two slayings in Montreal on the weekend as police continued a work slowdown, abandoning regular patrols and answering emergency calls only.

"The hold-up total is slightly higher than usual but we seem to be coping with the work load relative well," one of the 5,200 policemen involved in the slowdown said Sunday.

The slowdown began Friday when the Montreal Policemen's Brotherhood rejected the latest contract offer from city negotiators. The brotherhood has been demanding a modified four-day work week.

City officials have offered a four-day week to take effect Jan. 1, 1979.

The brotherhood has sent telegrams to Quebec Labor Minister Pierre-Marc Johnson and Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard asking them to name a special conciliator. But brotherhood director Andre Sasseville said Sunday there had been no reply.

Meanwhile, city negotiator Pierre Des Mwrais said he would meet with other members of the city negotiating committee to decide whether legal action should be taken against the brotherhood and individual policemen.

"Of course, we are always ready to return to the negotiating table," Des Marais added.

Last month Montreal police worked a four-day week work schedule drawn up by the brotherhood, but the schedule was abandoned after a week because of a court injunction forbidding it.

Wanted Poster Wrong

Architect Norman Spatz discovered he was on a wanted poster when a neighbor tried to arrest him and collect a $500 reward.

A hidden camera in a bank captured a robbery in progress last September in which the robber stuck a gun in Spatz's back. Somehow, the photograph sent to Montreal newspapers only showed Spatz at the counter with his hands up and did not show the gun, it says.

Police and banking institutions publish weekly photos of bank bandits being sought by police and offer $500 for information leading to their capture.

The picture of Spatz appeared in a number of newspapers with a total readership approaching one million.

The newspapers have been publishing the photograph again in recent days explaining that the man in the photograph is not the man sought by police.

FIFTH MURDER ATTEMPT FAILS

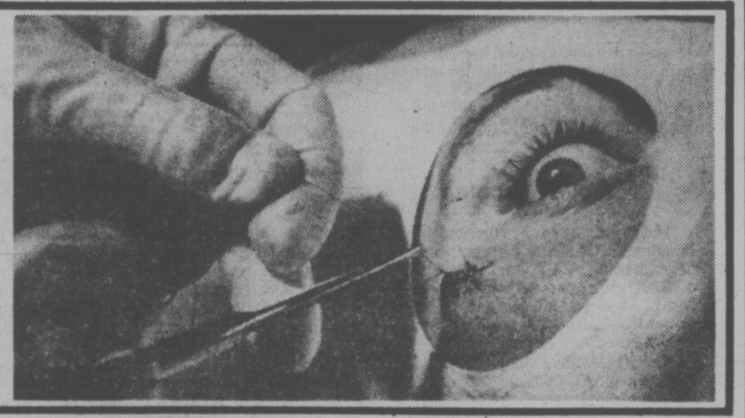
MONTREAL (CP) — The Star says a fifth attempt was made over the weekend on the life of a former key witness at the 1976 Quebec police commission inquiry into operations of Montreal's organized gangs.

The newspaper says Pierre McSween, now a taxi driver, had stopped his car early Saturday morning to pick up a passenger in west-end St. Henri when two gunmen opened fire on him.

It was the fifth attempt on his life, according to the Star, which says McSween called the newspaper's offices to talk about the most recent incident.

"I can't sleep," the Star quotes McSween as saying.

"I don't know whether somebody is going to barge into my home and kill me and my family. . .I can't get a permit to carry a gun because I have a record."



Watching the stitching with a careful eye, Canadian Press photographer Douglas Ball also remembered his camera. Ball , of Quebec City, received the cut while playing hockey. During his later patch-up he passed his camera to a doctor and asked him to press the shutter. The result was this picture — chosen as the Canadian Press Picture of the year feature award for 1977.

'DEEP THROAT' TAGGED?

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Nixon aide H. R. Haldeman says in his forthcoming book that he believes Fred Fielding, former deputy counsel to Richard Nixon, was the Watergate scandal's mysterious "Deep Throat", New York Magazine says.

In a brief entry in its New York Intelligencer section, the magazine said in this week's issue that it learned details in the yet-to-be-published book, The Ends of Power, from Haldeman family sources.

The magazine said the book will name the 38-year-old Fielding, who worked under White House counsel John Dean, as the source used by the Washington Post reporting team of Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein to break the Watergate scandal that led to Nixon's resignation.

Fielding, now a Washington lawyer, denied in a statement that he was Deep Throat.

"I have not had the opportunity to read Mr. Haldeman's book," he said. "But I can state that at least any part of his novel that names me as Deep Throat is sheer fantasy and nonsense. I emphatically deny the story and the accusation."

The magazine said the book will say that the 18½-minute erasure on one of the White House tape recordings which figured in the Watergate scandal, was done by Nixon and not his secretary, Rosemary Woods.

"Nixon intended to go through all the tapes, erasing incriminating conversations wherever he found them, but soon realized the task would take years," the magazine said, without further attribution.

Radio Disrupted

PRINCE GEORGE (CP)— Radio operators who staff local airport control towers returned to work Sunday evening after a four-hour work stoppage protesting imposition of federal Anti-Inflation Board guidelines on their contract.

Four of the six operators, members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, were designated as essential and spokesmen said the withdrawal of services curtailed airport operations by about 20 per cent.

CHINA NIBBLES

VANCOUVER (CP) — External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson's just-completed Asian trip has yielded some promising nibbles for Canadian business in a new-look China.

Jamieson arrived in Vancouver Sunday for an overnight stay before returning to Ottawa today.

No one in the group travelling with Jamieson is forecasting a great leap forward as China is still a tough market, although it seems to be opening rapidly to the West.

'No One Was Found . . .'

"I would like to ask the minister a question or two about the appointment of the chairman to the public school and post-secondary commission. The appointment came as a surprise to most people who are associated with university and post-secondary facilities because the gentleman in question has had most of his experience in Philadelphia in elementary and secondary schools . . . My reason for asking this is because we have many people with very great experience in the post-secondary field in Canada, some of whom have quite a familiarity with the B.C. system." — Pat McGeer, opposition MLA, speaking in the legislature, March 8, 1973.

"I ordered an exhaustive search by Price Waterhouse to find a Canadian for the job. No one was found, and Mr. Sherrell will start work March 1." — Education Minister Pat McGeer, in an interview with the press, Jan. 31, 1978.

The gentleman referred to in the first quote was John Bremer, hired by the NDP government as education commissioner to undertake a massive study of the entire B.C. educational system. The gentleman referred to in the second quote is, of course, Robbie Sherrell, hired by McGeer to be president of the Insurance Corporation of B.C.

There are some differences in the situations. For one thing, Sherrell is going to be paid $80,000 if he makes it to Canada to take the job. Bremer was worth only $28,000 a year back in 1973.

For another thing — and perhaps more important from the government's viewpoint — Bremer was already working in Canada (as a fellow at Dalhousie University) and had obtained proper clearance from the immigration authorities. Sherrell has not. And the longer the controversy continues, the more difficult it is going to be for him to receive it, since the federal immigration authorities are going to be very sure they are not giving in to any political pressure.

It was all so silly and unnecessary on McGeer's part. He may possibly be right that there are no Canadians suitable for the job, although it seems an excessively pessimistic view to take.

But the public would be far more likely to believe him when he said so if he had followed the proper procedures in the first place. He should, for example, have listed the job with Canada Manpower's professional employment division. And he should certainly have ensured that the job was advertised across Canada, rather than just in the Toronto Globe and Mail, before going out to search in the U.S. and England.

It is probably too late now to remedy the damage. Any first-class Canadian now is surely going to be wary about entering into the political hornet's nest that the Sherrell controversy has made the ICBC presidency. If immigration authorities cannot be persuaded to give Sherrell landed immigrant status, ICBC may be stuck, not only with someone not as good as Sherrell, but with someone not nearly as good as the best Canadian we could have had when the post first was advertised.

If that happens, McGeer will have done a grave disservice to his government, ICBC, and the public of B.C. by his stubborn rush to get Sherrell, regardless of the federal rules.

Roman Mileage

A librarian in Toronto is on the lookout for an acceptable metric term equivalent to the good old English word mileage. There is no word to describe similarly kilometres, even in French, the language of the nation which invented the Systeme International.

Kilometrage? A bit of a mouthful, and it seems too close to something your friendly B.C. Hydro meter reader might say. Killage? Rather brutal. The U.S. military have a bit of slang for kilometres — clicks, they call them — which might do. As in:

"How many clicks you getting on the buggy these days, Fred?" Definitely has possibilities.

But really, what's wrong with the word we've used for years — mileage? Far from any archaic associations with the length of King John's forearm or how long three barleycorns are, its derivation is suitably metric. The word mile comes from the Latin millia, meaning thousand. The Roman mile was a thousand paces.

And what's a kilometre but a thousand metres? If we used mileage to describe kilomtres, it would soon lose its association with the old English mile, just as it lost all relation to the even older and shorter Roman mile. Let's hear it for mileage.

Is Inflation a U.S. Problem?

WASHINGTON — Based on the past experiences of western governments that have attempted to whip inflation with voluntary armies, it is difficult to wax too optimistic about Jimmy Carter's new voluntary restraint program.

In his budget address last week, Carter issued an appeal to business, labor and public to agree voluntarily to curb wages and prices. The administration's target is to limit wage and price increases this year to less than the average increases of the past two years.

In the case of labor, the White House would like to see a drop of a half a percentage point in unit labor costs during the year.

The president's appeal was coupled with an assurance that the thought of imposing any type of mandatory restraint had not even entered his mind. If the theme sounds familiar, it should.

Credibility Problem

The words used by the president to outline his voluntary program could have been copied from old speeches of Richard Nixon or Pierre Trudeau, both of whom presided at the imposition of controls after attempts at voluntarism failed.

George Meany, the octogenarian head of the AFL-CIO, did not bother to issue the usual statement promising to study the president's proposal to determine whether labor could be persuaded to sit down and discuss the matter with government and industry. Labor, he thundered, would have nothing to do with any program that even hinted at mandatory wage controls, suggesting strongly that he was sure this was the direction in which the president was headed.

Though organized labor is universally and instinctively opposed to any measure to control the proceeds that accrue to the lunchbuckets, Jimmy Carter's task is doubly difficult.

First, labor's memory of the last go-round with controls is vivid. It would be roughly akin to a successor to Pierre Trudeau attempting to persuade labor to sit down and discuss voluntary restraint, all the while assuring them that he was unequivocably opposed to the imposition of mandatory guidelines, should the voluntary program fail.

The problem facing Carter, in short, is one of political credibility. Why should they believe Carter when he says he is opposed to controls?

But Carter's problem is even more difficult than that. At least Nixon and Trudeau had managed to persuade their publics that inflation was a problem. There is no indication that Carter has yet crossed even this first low-level hurdle. The reason is, of course, that everyone is more concerned about growth and unemployment than inflation.

Inflation, all agree, is an evil thing. It would seem, however, that it has not yet reached "issue" proportions. Last year, the U.S. had an inflation rate of six per cent. And the administration is confidentally predicting that it can hold that line. The performance assumption is, of course, predicated on Carter's abilities to sell his voluntary program.

The evidence of the near non-concern about inflation is reflected in congress and boardrooms and newsrooms. The House and Senate committees which earlier this week opened hearings into the new budget are preoccupied with only one thing: Will the stimulus proposed by the president be sufficient to meet the predicted growth levels needed to repair the country's balance of payment problems? Business, on balance, seems more concerned about the tax reforms that would affect their operations.

Even the president's own Council of Economic Advisers has relegated the inflation problem to the bottom drawer. In its annual economic report made public last week, the council warned that "the world may well face a darkening economic future" if world leaders fail to reverse "the poor performance of 1977." The council concluded that any measure to adopt restrictive monetary or fiscal policies in the interest of combating inflation "would result mainly in a slowing of real growth rather than a reduction in the rate of price increase."

Ignored Him

Many may argue that the Washington press corps is not genuinely reflective of public opinion, but their instincts do have significance, as all politicians know. At his last news conference earlier this week, Jimmy Carter gave an opening statement in which he reiterated his economic policy. The president's intention was clearly to elicit a few wellaimed economic questions that would allow him to expand on his plans for fighting inflation and unemployment and stimulating growth.

The press corps, in effect, ignored the president and denied him the opportunity to get anything economic off his mind. There were a total of 17 questions asked at the news conference. Four questions pertained to the firing of a Philadelphia prosecutor, three dealt with the Russian satellite that plopped down in northern Canada and the remaining inquiries dealt with everything from the Middle East to the coal strike to the importation of immigrant workers. The only question the president received which could be considered vaguely economic in nature, was one about a potential fight with congressional leaders. Inflation? The word crossed only the lips of Jimmy Carter. This is probably what the historians mean when they say that the presidency tends to age a man.

LeBlanc Tells Fish Stories

OTTAWA — One idea that Romeo LeBlanc loves to talk about is swapping Canadian fish for Russian oil. "By law, they now have two non-meat days a week," explains the fisheries minister. "They need our fish. We need their oil." He also wonders if Canadian fish might not be bartered for Polish coal.

Another idea that LeBlanc talks about with infectious enthusiasm is the 20 fisheries community service officers who, by the end of this year, will be living in Atlantic seaboard outports. "Basically, their job is to fight for the fishermen, against the government and against anyone else. To pick them, we laid down two requirements. No educational qualifications needed. The selection board had to include two fishermen from the community with a joint right — the public service commission did its nut over this one — of veto."

A third idea that bubbles out from LeBlanc is to "uncouple" fishermen from their dependence upon fishing companies who now own all the large boats off the east coast. "I find offensive the concept of a mystical link between a fishing company and 'its' fishermen. Fish processors should have to compete for their raw material just as food processors now do." There are snags to this idea. Steel stern trawlers cost up to $6 million. "There's all the difference, though," says LeBlanc, "between fishermen who dump their fish on the wharf and go right to bed and those who stay and care for it because they are part of management."

Snags in Ideas

Those three ideas are roughly three times as many as government has been able to come up with to cure the long woebegone Atlantic fishermen during the last couple of decades.

For a start LeBlanc, beyond argument, is the best fisheries minister since James Sinclair (yes, Margaret's father) in the late 1950s. LeBlanc isn't much of an administrator. He is resolutely parochial. (He has no intention, though, of going after the vacant New Brunswick Liberal leadership.) Basically, LeBlanc is good at his job because he loves it. "It's the best in the cabinet, and I mean it. It deals with real things, real problems, real people, not with generalities."

As well, LeBlanc got lucky. The 200-mile limit came along. LeBlanc's contribution was less to get the limit than to insist, repeatedly, that it wasn't a cure-all.

When LeBlanc took over in 1974, the Atlantic fishery was, in words he used then, "a crippled, unco-ordinated giant." That year, fishing companies lost $50 million. Fish stocks, gutted by foreign fleets, were dwindling toward extinction.

Today, all the trends curve upwards. In 1976, Canadians caught 435 million metric tons of ground fish (cod, redfish, haddock) or just 39 per cent of the total northwest Atlantic catch. This year, Canadian landings will inch up to 467 million metric tons, but they'll constitute 69 per cent of the strictly-controlled total. By 1985, as stocks recover and as quotas are relaxed Canadians catch 700-750 million metric tons — at ever-rising prices.

The Atlantic fishery still is a long way from full recovery, let alone from affluence. Processing plants are working at only two-fifths of capacity. Even an exceptional inshore catch raised Newfoundland's total landed value to just $65.5 million in the first 10 months of 1977 compared to $58.4 million the year before.

It's the direction that counts. LeBlanc's rule is: "You can't catch the same fish twice." He means, to mix metaphors, that two large fish left in the sea for tomorrow are better than one small one caught today.

LeBlanc opposes, for example, the Atlantic provinces proposal for a $900 million fishing fleet expansion which would create instant jobs in shipyards. "Our present fleet is under-utilized. The more you increase capacity the more pressure you mreate to increase the catch."

Leblanc opposes as well a West German company's proposed take-over of the Birdseye plant in Newfoundland, which the provincial government supports because of a promised $30 million expansion. "I would not be happy to see fishing licences held permanently by foreigners," says LeBlanc.

Lastly, he opposes using chartered foreign trawlers (available cheap because of a world-wide surplus) to increase the under-utilized catch of northern cod off Labrador. "Let them stay in the sea. By the time our inshore fishermen catch them, they'll be fatter." He does, though, plan to charter foreign freezer trawlers to go after species like silver hake and grenadine that Canadians traditionally have ignored.

Leave 'em in Sea

LeBlanc, indeed, doesn't even want Canadians to go after all the fish which might be caught within our 200-mile limit. "It's not just a matter of being too greedy," he explains.

"It's a matter of trading off rights to catch some of our fish in return for access to foreign markets, the processing of foreign fish in our plants and a guarantee foreign ships will use our ports for repairs and maintenance."

Add it all together and you have something that a few years ago would have been simply unthinkable. The fish are coming back, we now own them, people the world over need them. Potentially, though it's still a long way yet from happening, the Atlantic fishery is in no better economic health than the manufacturing industry upon which central Canada has fattened for the past three decades.

Job Exporter

Canada is a great exporter — of jobs! We often send jobs to other countries when we get pay increases — because pay hikes raise prices unless our production increases. Has your output increased along with your pay? If not, you may soon export a job, perhaps your job!

How? — First, U.S. and other nations will stop buying our products if our prices no longer compete. (Would you pay more for their product if you could get one like it for less?) Thus we export jobs.

Second, will Canadians on low or semi-fixed incomes continue to buy your product or service at inflated prices? How can they if their limited dollars buy less? If your item is too high they will do without it or find a substitute. So more jobs are killed, or exported.

Third, will mid-bracket Canadians buy higher priced Canadian products instead of less expensive imports of similar quality? Not likely. But we can fix that, can't we — by higher tariffs and quotas on imports — so our industries and jobs will be "protected"? Sounds easy, but the countries we restrict will then restrict our products and buy elsewhere. More pay for the same output, and then "protectionism" — a perfect formula for exporting jobs, for higher domestic prices, worse unemployment, ruined trade, and then — Depression.

Depression? Remember the stock market crash? It began the last week in October, 1929 immediately after Wall Street learned that the U.S. Congress had the votes to enact the disastrous Smoot-Hawley protective tariff. The Great Depression soon followed as this law choked trade and other countries retaliated. Depression is avoidable if inflation is ended and trade is free to provide unlimited jobs. — Help End Inflation Association, 5093 Lochside Drive.

Income Tax Up?

I am not aware of a single statement, editorial or any other comment in your paper with regard to the 50 per cent increase in the rate of the government of British Columbia income tax of from 30.5 per cent to 46 per cent of the federal tax.

Surely it is time for a little reasonable restraint on their part too. — D. J. Burke, R.R.1, Mill Bay, B.C.

(Editor's note: Although the increase sounds substantial, it actually is based on a transfer in taxing power from Ottawa to the provinces and should not result in any net increase in taxes for the individual citizen.)

B.C. Tel Overload?

I would like to comment briefly on the B.C. Tel labor dispute. Having just moved with my family to Victoria from Vancouver, I needed the company to hook up a telephone for me. After three days of trying to get some action over the phone, only to be greeted by busy signals, or recorded apologetic messages, I decided to make my appeal in person.

I bravely crossed the picket line in front of B.C. Tel's main building; inside waited a line of about 35 people queued up to be served by just two management workers. The security guard assured me that even though the doors would be closed in 20 minutes, everyone in the line would be attended to. One hour and 10 minutes later I found myself at the head of the line, not in the best humor. The woman who served me didn't seem to be in the best condition either. But she was courteous, able and, above all, quick. She was working to maximum capacity, although quite visibly tired. The wait, while questionably worth it, was satisfying in one respect. During my four years of residence in British Columbia, under B.C. Tel's jurisdiction, I have never been treated with more respect and efficiency than during this last transaction.

The point being, that while we are inconvenienced during this idiotic power struggle, I feel that the downgrading of services is minimal, when that fact that B.C. Tel is operating with one-fifth their normal work force is taken into account.

It leads me to wonder if the only point that the union has made during this strike is that their workers are already grossly overpaid for the work load they seem to carry. — Marc Monsarrat, Victoria.

Wild Winters

I have just finished reading your editorial entitled Winter of Our Discontent (Times, Jan. 25) which describes the misery of a typical Victoria winter, including some references, albeit weak ones if intended to add substance to the title, to our current winter season. My reaction to this editorial lies somewhere between mere amazement and utter disbelief. I haven't quite decided whether your editor is a transplanted easterner who is homesick (why, I can't imagine), a local resident who has spent every day of his life in Victoria and thus never experienced a real winter or simply someone whom the Chamber of Commerce neglected to invite to their most recent tea party. While the real editor may possibly never stand up, his position could not withstand the rigors of debate because it purposely excluded the essential element of all debates — comparison! On that score alone, it fails miserably.

As a former resident of eastern Canada who by choice relocated to this beautiful city and this super climate 10 months ago, I am presently enjoying "winter" for the first time after many years in the freezing east. I love the climate and I love the friendliness. During that 10-month period, Victoria has not even experienced a heavy wind storm, certainly not by eastern standards. Not for an instant have I missed the 250 inches of snow I faced annually. I have not missed the constant subzero temperatures which continue for weeks at a time. I am managing quite nicely without the blizzards which begin in early November and conveniently persist, often until the end of April. I am surviving the absence of hazardous, impossible driving conditions and putting up with the nuisance of being able to get my car started in the morning. Without too much difficulty, I am becoming accustomed to not seeing downed power lines and not being able to look forward to the possibility and sheer fun of being without heat or electricity for three or four days.

Even the Victoria rain your editor complains about is rather mild-mannered compared with the wind-driven, slashing, freezing rain of the east coast. Had he ever been forced to wade through a foot of water flowing down an ice-encrusted street, he perhaps would not find it so intolerable "ducking the spray from his partner's squishy divots."

I can only suggest that he spend all of next winter in London, Ont. so that he can make an on-site comparison. Should he be so reckless as to accept this challenge, I shall, upon his return to lotus land, reimburse him for his air fare, provided of course, he somehow survives the eastern winter. I'm betting that he won't! — G. E. Wilcox, 921 Rankin Road.

Trapping Thoughts

In the letter Humane Trapping, in the Times of Jan. 17, the writer states that the Agricultural Rural Development Agency was teaching humane methods of trapping. The writer states that this is misleading because there is no humane trap on the market yet.

This might be true except for snares, but there are humane methods of trapping with foothold traps. The animals that provide the largest number of pelts in Canada today are muskrat, mink, otter and beaver. These are all water animals and it is most important to an experienced trapper to set traps for these animals near or in water so that when the animal is caught it jumps into the water to escape and the trap is fixed so it will not come back up and the animal drowns within a few minutes. This is just as humane as any method now used to slaughter hogs, beef or chickens and much faster than fish caught on hook and line, and I haven't yet heard of anyone starting a campaign against fishing in B.C.

As for other land animals (red foxes, raccoons, skunks, weasels), their pelts are not worth the time involved and they have had very little value since the late 1940s. There is no closed season for hunting these animals. Canada lynx, wolves, fisher, martin, wolverine, bears: experienced trappers know that to hold these animals in a foothold trap it is necessary to not have the trap fastened solidly but attached to a drag at the end of the trap chain four feet long, so the animal can move about and find shelter.

In another letter in the same issue the picture of Mr. George Clements of APFA holding two traps is a very good example of trick photography. I use this method with my camera to take a picture of myself if the largest trout I have caught is a 10-inch dandy by holding the lens close and holding the trout out closer to the lens it looks like a 20-incher. The trap on the right is a single spring Oniada Victor jump trap and was made in sizes No. 0 for weasels or rats, No. 1 popular for muskrat or mink and No. 2 for foxes and bobcat. I never knew of the company making them with teeth. The one in the picture looks like a No. 2 that has a jaw spread of about 5½ inches and I never saw one with teeth, and many times have accidentally caught my fingers.

During the 1920s and early 1930s when tradesmen's wages were 40 or 50 cents an hour and a red fox pelt was worth from $20 to $35, there were many professional fox trappers and many caught 40 to 60 each season, and kept them under control. But after the Second World War they went out of fashion and a red fox skin was worth about $1. Trappers stopped trapping and they became overpopulated. Then mother nature took over and they became infested with rabies and died a slow and, I imagine, painful death. The fittest survived, as all things with nature. Not like humans. We send the fittest and smartest to war to get killed and the others become politicians and labor leaders and have sure messed up the country. Maybe someday mother nature will take over and help us.

That rabies outbreak proved very expensive to owners of dogs and cats as it was necessary to have all dogs and cats innoculated and at $10 a shot for each shot the veterinarians became wealthy.

There is one thing true — that all animals live by hunting other animals and killing for food and they never do it in a humane way, as they start to eat before the animal is dead. And did you ever watch a cat play with a mouse it had caught before eating it? — Darrell J. Johnson, 20-314 Goldstream Road.

Fair Exchange

Concerning the item So Much for Friends in Town Talk Jan. 24, how about equal time for a Canadian visiting the U.S. In December I spent three weekends in Yakima, Wash.

I don't blame our local businesses for not accepting U.S. currency at exchange value. In Yakima the stores, gas stations, etc. will not accept Canadian currency, period!

They expect us to change our money to U.S. currency before we cross the border and I say they should do the same. By the way, the only place that did take my Canadian currency was Yakima Meadows race track and they took 15 per cent exchange. How's that for friendship! — R. G. Duguette, 1514 Edgemont Road.

Wicked

I want to endorse the comments made recently in a letter which appeared in the Times (Jan. 27) entitled Boycott Godspell, written by Rev. E. A. Follows.

Only one word can explain the production, Godspell — wicked.

Those who make fun of God, God will also make fun of them. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." (Galatians 6:7). — Rev. R. C. Nast, 2789 Wenger Terrace.

Thanks, Hydro

I was pleased to hear of B.C. Hydro's latest rate increase. Perhaps with this raise in rates, people will begin to conserve electricity. If the trend towards a conserver society begins now, maybe we can save some fertile river valleys from being flooded. We could save the countryside from kilometre after kilometre of 500 kilovolt power lines as is proposed by B.C. Hydro for the Sunshine Coast, Texada, Lasqueti and Vancouver Islands. The construction of nuclear generating plants on the Island would be unnecessary.

The Science Council of Canada has stated "more than 50 per cent of all energy supply is discarded as waste." The Swedes use less electrical energy than we do and enjoy a higher standard of living. Let's see if we can improve our record in energy use to keep B.C. beautiful. — Archer Katschor, 1370 South Island Highway, Campbell River.

Saps We Are

This year Canada is to spend $2.34 billion for jet fighter planes, untold billions for the navy. I have just received a report put out by the International Peace Research Institute which details costs for armaments. "In our age of science revolution more than 400,000 scientists and engineers do nothing but develop new arms: For each hour of an eight hour work day, the cost for arms is $175 million." Enough? Twenty-two years ago, at the UN, the Soviet Union offered disarmament "on our terms." Our part of the human race claims to be of the order homo sapiens. As I recall when I was young this always seemed to be abbreviated to homo sap. Saps we are, at least we of the western world. What was, and is, the matter with us? — F. A. Thornley, Saanichton.

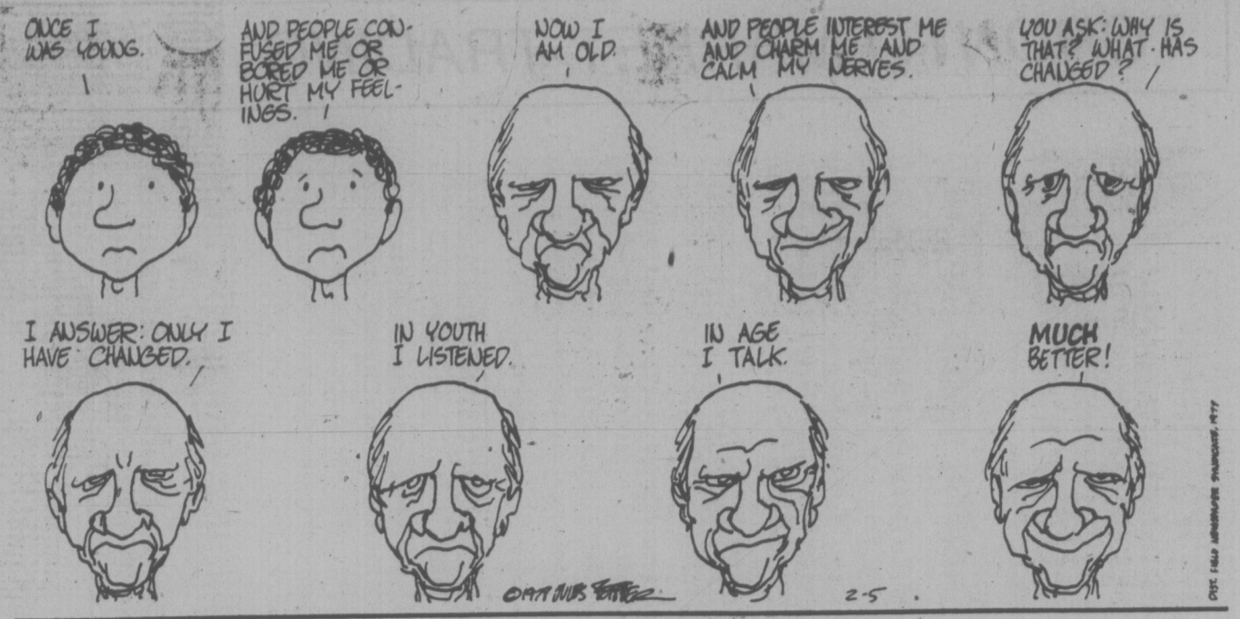
Keep Librarian

As the parent of a grade one student at Monterey school, I wish to express my concern about the possible removal of the full-time librarian from the school library.

The Greater Victoria school board's concern over rising costs in the face of a declining school enrolment is commendable and easily understood. However; it would be a grave mistake to lessen the effectiveness of a basic educational facility, the school library.

In fact, I find it difficult to believe that the board is seriously considering such a step or that it would develop regulations which would encourage principals to move librarians into classrooms as teachers. The need among young people for improved reading and comprehension skills is regularly cited as a major factor in poor academic achievement. To downgrade one of the most effective facilities for the acquisition of these skills would be an error of judgment which would have lasting effect upon our children's education.

Instead, I would suggest that the school board should study ways in which school libraries can be upgraded and co-ordinated to provide the essential resources for a core curriculum with emphasis upon academic achievement. — D. W. Miller, 339 Foul Bay Road.



Europe's Ecologists Flex Muscles

THE ECONOMIST

Forget the reds and the true-blues. European politics are turning green; or so the ecologists would have us believe.

Last spring France's "green people" captured 10 per cent of the vote in large cities in the municipal elections. Last autumn, Europe's ecologists banded together in a new movement, called European parliament. And now the ecologists of Lower Saxony in West Germany have declared their intention of contesting the important state election on June 4 with their own burgeoning political party.

Admittedly, they will be lucky to poll the minimum of five per cent needed to get into parliament — for that they would require 180,000 votes — but they are bound to influence the election campaign, and the result.

Their main source of support and of recruitment are the Burgerinitiativen, the citizens' action groups whose hostility to nuclear power has obliged the federal government drastically to revise its energy program.

The federal roof organization of these groups, which have a total membership of about 300,000 throughout the country, says it has no intention of forming a federal party, but will support ecologists at the polls and will probably field candidates in the elections for the European parliament.

It is already stepping up its international co-operation, notably with France, Holland, Denmark and Sweden. It may even change its mind about a federal party if the new ecologists score a success in Lower Saxony.

The Lower Saxons, whose party is known as the Green Enrivonment List or, more euphoniously, as the Green Party, consider themselves in the front line of the ecological movement. Their state has seen some violent demonstrations against nuclear power stations, and the town of Gorleben, near the border with East Germany, has been chosen by the federal government as the site for storing nuclear waste and for reprocessing nuclear fuel elements. In last October's local elections two ecological candidates won seats on rural councils, which helped to stir political ambitions.

Besides, a small party now has a better chance of wielding influence in Lower Saxony than in most other states in West Germany. At the last state election in 1974 the Social Democrats and the Free Democrats limped home with a majority of one seat. When the Social Democratic prime minister retired in mid-term, defections from the coalition benches caused a Christian Democrat, Ernst Albrecht, to be elected as his successor.

Albrecht presided over a minority government until, after much heart-searching, the Free Democrats joined him in a coalition last year. Thanks partly to the Green Party, the chances are that he will be returned with a working majority next time, perhaps with an overall majority. The Greens are more likely to take votes from the Social Democrats and the Liberals than from the Christian Democrats.

The skeptics say that opposition to nuclear power stations and support for clean air and pure rivers is all very well, but it does not make a political platform. What about foreign affairs and defence and education and, especially, jobs?

The French ecologists did well in municipal elections, where local issues matter; spectacularly well, polling up to half the total, in areas with worries about nuclear power plants. But the latest opinion surveys suggest that they may get no more than about three per cent of the poll in France's general election in March.

Elsewhere in Europe they have not even got that far. Some of the more environmentally conscious countries (for which read the more affluent) have at least had flirtations with the politics of environmentalism but even Holland and Denmark, with extreme forms of proportional representation, have no "green" members of parliament.

In Switzerland, environmentalists have had limited success in local politics, but this has been invariably helped by special factors, mainly nuclear power station protests.

The alternative way for greenery to come to the fore is for other parties to embrace it, with mutual advantage. It used to be thought that environmentalists were invariably inclined to the left. The ecologists in France have turned out to span the entire left-right spectrum, and in Sweden it was the centrists who sowed green seeds several years ago and have since reaped the electoral benefit.

The trouble with this approach is an embarrassment of success. In countries such as Switzerland and Holland almost all politicians now take it for granted that green is beautiful. But nobody has yet managed to work out how to reconcile this conviction with the need for the growth on which jobs depend.

Putting Sentences Together

By KAREN ODGEN

"Give me liberty or give me death!" When Patrick Henry spoke before the Virginia Convention in 1775, his cry rang through the land. He had joined two simple sentences together, and the joining gave his plea its passion. The strength of the statement comes from the opposition of the two clauses.

Last week we looked at the different ways in which we can use simple sentences to emphasize ideas and to vary our writing. Simple sentences can be joined together to create compound sentences like Patrick Henry's. Similarly, various elements within a sentence can be joined together to create compound structures. We can compound words, phrases, and clauses as well as sentences by connecting them with and, or but, or or.

We tend to think in terms of co-ordination, of compounding, of pairs of words — black and white, up and down, bread and butter, pots and pans, joy and sorrow, body and soul, innocence and experience, life and death. Co-ordinated phrases, as well, are common to our speech and to our writing. Think, for example, of the marriage ceremony in which we pledge "to have and to hold" one another "for better for worse, for richer for poorer, in sickness and in health." Compounding entire clauses is another way of co-ordinating ideas, as we can see in Samuel Johnson's comment that "It matters not how a man dies, but how he lives."

If we listen carefully to the compounded elements we have just looked at, we can hear their rhythm. They balance one another, and much of their effect comes from that balance. Because the co-ordinated elements in a sentence are equal parts of the construction, they must take the same grammatical form. If one element is a noun, the other must be. If one element is a phrase, the second one must be, too. Grammarians call this principle parallel construction. If we examine a passage from Ecclesiastes, we can see parallel construction at work. In the passage we are told that there is "a time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up; . . . a time to weep, and a time to laugh." Throughout the entire passage the contrasting ideas are equally important and are therefore given equal grammatical rank. In each phrase a noun is followed by an infinitive.

Failure to express equal elements of a sentence in parallel grammatical constructions creates faulty, awkward sentences.

Let us look at two such sentences and see how they can be improved.

1. "Important to any discussion of Margaret Laurence are the facts that she is a woman, a novelist, and from Manitoba."

Here the words "woman," "novelist" and "from Manitoba" are, through the use of the conjunction "and," given equal importance in the sentence. However, the writer has failed to be grammatically consistent. "Woman" and "novelist" are single words, but "from Manitoba" is a prepositional phrase. The sentence can be corrected easily by changing "from Manitoba" to "a Manitoban." With the change the words gain the rhythm of the compound structure.

2. "Her responsibilities included answering the telephone, typing business letters, and she had to file the mail."

Here all three responsibilities should follow the same grammatical form so that the sentence reads, "Her responsibilities included answering the telephone, typing business letters, and filing the mail."

Using compound structures offers the writer several opportunities. In the first place it allows him to emphasize by means of juxtaposition and implied comparison. In his essay Of Studies, Sir Francis Bacon says, "Reading maketh a full man, conference a ready man, and writing an exact man." The advantages resulting from each activity are more clearly distinguished by being set off against the other two. John F. Kennedy's Inaugural Address makes extensive use of parallel constructions. For example, the compound sentence "Let us never negotiate out of fear, but let us never fear to negotiate" makes its point emphatically by repeating the syntactical structure but reversing its meaning.

Showing relationships is another advantage offered by compounding. The conjunction "or" indicates a choice between two equal matters as in the slogan "Guns or butter," and as in Hamlet's question "To be or not to be." When we use "but" to join two simple sentences into one compound one, we generally show that one equal element is contrary to the other — "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil."

The little word "and" is powerful; it can show several kinds of relationships. According to a popular tune "love and marriage go together like a horse and carriage," implying that after love comes marriage as after the horse comes the carriage. When we learn that two and two are four, we are also learning that "and" means plus. If we say "Tom and Mary are here," we mean that Tom is here along with Mary. In the sentence "It is nice and warm today," "and" means "as well as." And in the sentence I am writing now, by its position at the beginning, the word "and" means "also." In "He jogged four miles and took a shower," "and" means "then." So we can see that putting words, phrases, clauses, or sentences together in a compound structure allows us to show the nature of the relationship between them.

The third advantage the writer gains from using compound structures is that they allow him to put several sentences together into one tighter group. Although using simple sentences is, as we saw last week, effective as one means of emphasizing our point and of varying our style, if we write only in simple sentences we are apt to be seen as simple-minded. Consider, for example, the following group of sentences.

> During the late 1960's there was much student activity on U.S. college campuses. Students protested the war in Vietnam. They protested the invasion of Cambodia. They set up picket lines. They demanded that ROTC be abolished.

These five sentences can be combined into one through the use of parallel construction.

> During the late 1960's students in the United States protested the war in Vietnam and the invasion of Cambodia by setting up picket lines and demanding the abolition of ROTC.

Synthesizing the five sentences into one enables the writer to show what kind of relationship he sees between his ideas. It allows him to cut down on the number of words he uses. And it gives a sense of forward movement to his writing.

Rhythm is the fourth advantage that compounding offers. Too often we fail to consider how our writing sounds, and yet that sound is an important part of the effect our writing has on the reader. When ideas are parallel, when they are of equal value, the harmony between them can be shown through the use of balanced elements within a sentence. In songs, compounding comes naturally — "Tea for two and two for tea," "O Canada! Our home and native land!" "You and the night and the music," "Oh you'll take the high road and I'll take the low road, and I'll be in Scotland before you." Using the same kind of structure in our writing will help to make it flow more freely.

Compounding sentences or elements within a sentence allows the writer to show the co-ordination of ideas, to give equal weight to equal matters. However, when you write you need to remember that compound structures must reflect a logical compounding of ideas. Simply putting two sentences together does not strengthen your writing if there is no real relationship between the ideas. For example, "I play the piano, and I have a dentist appointment tomorrow" is a weak sentence because it does not make clear the connection, if any, between the two ideas.

The choice between using a simple sentence and a compound one reflects the writer's intention, his emphasis, and his insight into logical relationships. There is a time to simplify, and a time to compound.

U.K. Police Hunt 'Ripper'

HUDDERSFIELD, England (AP) — A teen-age girl whose naked body was found mutilated near this town's red light district may be the seventh victim of a modern-day Jack the Ripper, according to police.

More than 100 detectives and uniformed officers are hunting the killer of 18-year-old Helen Rytka after police using tracking dogs on a routine patrol stumbled onto the body in a lumber yard.

Police said the girl, who had been reported missing Thursday, suffered severe injuries to her head and body. Tests have not yet determined whether she had been sexually assaulted, officials said.

"It is too early yet to say that this young woman is a 'ripper' victim but we obviously have it in mind," said George Oldfield of the West Yorkshire criminal investigation division.

The assistant constable said Miss Rytka had recently moved to this small town 24 kilometres southwest of Leeds, a major industrial city more than 320 kilometres northwest of London. But she had in that time "been warned for soliciting" by police, Oldfield added.

The Ripper, as he is called by police and the British news media, is believed responsible for the deaths of at least five women in the Leeds area during the last 27 months in or around red light districts. A sixth victim survived an attack.

CTCA Announcement

Chairman of the Board of the Canadian Telecommunications Carriers Association, J.-C. Delorme, recently announced the appointment of D.J. Cruickshank as President of the Association. Mr. Cruickshank was formerly President and Chief Executive Officer, Rolls-Royce (Canada), Ltd. CTCA provides a vehicle for industry-wide co-operation among telecommunications carriers in Canada, interfacing with governments, the media, the public and plays a major role in international affairs.

WOMEN PROTEST government of President Anasticio Somoza in suburb of Altamira in Managua, Nicaragua, by beating pots and pans. National Guardsmen later attacked the women with clubs. Hundreds of housewives have vowed to continue the pots and pans disruption every night until Somoza resigns.

White Standards

SALISBURY (AP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith says that the presence of white men will be the deciding factor in maintaining high standards in Rhodesia after implementation of black majority rule.

"This is no reflection on black Rhodesians but is obvious after a realistic look at what has happened elsewhere on the continent, such as military dictatorships and one-party states," Smith said.

Chief Jeremiah Chirau, one of three locally-based black leaders with whom Smith is negotiating a transition to black majority rule, has left for Europe, an aide said.

The aide said Chirau would visit representatives of West European governments and opposition parties and return in time for the resumption of talks Tuesday with Smith, Bishop Abel Muzorewa and Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole.

Airport Battle Rages

NARITA (Reuter) — Eight hundred Japanese riot police clashed today with about 250 left-wing demonstrators, who hurled gasoline bombs and stones in an attempt to stop the demolition of a concrete fortress they had built to impede the opening of Tokyo's new international airport.

Ten policemen were injured, including two caught inside a car that burst into flames after being hit by a Molotov cocktail near the airport gates, police said.

The demonstration against the planned opening of the $2.6-billion airport March 30 was the latest in a series of clashes since the government announced plans for the facility 11 years ago.

Police said no arrests had been made so far as the battle continued for control of a 38-foot-high concrete and steel structure near a runway.

An estimated 30 leftists were holed up in the recently-completed fortress, which has no opening except for a small entrance, police said.

A spokesman for the demonstrators said recently the fortress had been built as a base for future attempts to halt the opening of the airport, which was completed in 1973.

But the opening of the airport, 61 kilometres east of Tokyo, has been put back several times because of the demonstrations.

SOVIET CODE BROKEN

TOKYO (Reuter) — The Japanese defence agency has deciphered a top secret code used by pilots of Soviet MiG-25 jet combat planes, the Japanese news agency Kyodo says, quoting agency sources.

The decoding followed analysis of data from a MiG-25 plane which a defecting Soviet pilot flew to the northern Japanese airport of Hakodate in September, 1976, the sources are quoted as saying.

Vietnamese Envoy Agrees to Leave UN

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — The Vietnamese government's recall of its chief United Nations delegate, named by United States authorities as an accomplice in an espionage case, probably ended the dispute caused by his earlier rejection of a U.S. expulsion order, diplomatic sources here said Sunday.

The sources said they do not expect the Hanoi government to return the ambassador, Dinh Ba Thi, to New York City after he goes home.

He is the first UN diplomat of his high rank ever to face a U.S. expulsion order.

Thi and his aides were not immediately available for comment, but UN observers said they will be surprised if he is not out of the U.S. within a week.

The U.S. state department called for his prompt removal but a reasonable time is usually allowed for a foreign envoy declared persona non grata (unwelcome) to wind up his affairs.

In Washington, state department spokesman Charles Shapiro said of the recall: "We welcome it, if it is true. We have assumed all along that Thi would leave."

Shapiro said the U.S. hopes "this will not be a setback to normalization talks" between Washington and Hanoi.

It is not known whether Thi will use some of the allowed time to follow up his protest against the U.S. action with further appeals for UN support. The Vietnamese foreign ministry also protested the expulsion order.

A statement issued by his mission Friday said the expulsion order is totally unacceptable. It called on delegates of other states to rally around Thi.

Several members of the non-aligned group met privately Saturday, at the initiative of Cuba, to discuss the situation. The Communist members also deliberated over it and plan to call on UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim today.

They are expected to protest against the U.S. action and declare their support for Thi's denials that he abused U.S. hospitality, but diplomatic sources observed this would be routine in such cases.

Several Communist delegates, but never a UN diplomat of Thi's high rank, have quietly left the country after being named by the U.S. as spies or receivers of classified material. Thi is the first UN diplomat to have said he would not go.

Informed of this Friday, several experienced diplomats said they felt it was a bit of bravado and that, like the others, he too would depart.

Reds Expand Civil Defence

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon says the number of Soviet citizens involved in civil defence projects outnumbers similar U.S. workers by about 16 to one, and the disparity makes some officials wonder if the Soviet Union might not believe nuclear war is a "reasonable option."

Russia is expanding construction of nuclear blast shelters for key industrial workers, as well as for political, military and managerial leaders, the U.S defence department has told Congress.

The Pentagon report estimated that more than 100,000 civilian and military personnel are involved full time in the Russian civil defence program. In contrast, U.S. officials say there are about 600 federal employees and 5,500 others on the state and local levels working on civil defence in the United States.

Gen. George Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said in his formal report to Congress that U.S. civil defence "has been accorded a low priorty and does not maintain an effective capability."

The country's top military officer said the strategic nuclear balance and the United States' ability to deter a nuclear attack could be upset "should the Soviets believe their civil defence program makes nuclear war a reasonable option."

Defence Secretary Harold Brown is known to remain unconvinced that any civil defence program, no matter how extensive, could prevent nuclear devastation.

More Spiked Oranges Discovered

Times News Services

BRUSSELS — More oranges contaminated with mercury were found in three Belgian towns during the weekend, but there were no reports of persons being poisoned, health officials said Sunday.

In Geel, northern Belgium, a family noticed a strange deposit in a glass into which orange juice was being squeezed. Analysis showed it to be mercury.

It has not been established whether the oranges came from Israel. A few Israeli and Spanish oranges injected with mercury have appeared in Western Europe in recent days causing some sickness, but no deaths.

Speculation is that the fruit was tampered with in Europe, probably at the Belgian port of Antwerp.

Authorities said contaminated oranges found Sunday at Steendorp were Israeli imports. They were taken to police by a housewife who thought they looked suspicious. Police seized remaining stocks in shops where they were purchased.

Police also said a poisoned Israeli orange with clearly visible injection marks was purchased at Charleroi in southern Belgium.

The Palestine Liberation Organization has denied trying to damage the Israeli economy by poisoning the oranges, which are a major Israeli export.

A group calling itself the Arab Revolutionary Army Palestinian Commando has said it sabotaged the oranges, but the PLO said there is no such group.

Fish Pact Backed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal Labor Minister John Munro says he will fight to have British Columbia fishermen covered by the Canada Labor Code so they can have full bargaining rights.

Munro's promise produced a standing ovation Saturday from delegates to the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union (UFAWU) convention here.

The union, which has been fighting for recognition under federal legislation, received a setback last December when the Supreme Court of Canada ruled that under the Canada Labor Code the fishermen and fish processors do not have an employee-employer relationship.

The packing companies negotiate with the UFAWU on a minimum price for net-caught salmon and herring but the actual prices are established by the companies bidding against each other.

Munro said he would also take back to the federal cabinet the UFAWU's complaint of harrassment by the federal combines branch which has attempted to conduct an inquiry into the operation of the B.C. fishing industry.

He said he did not agree with some critics of the proposed wages and prices monitoring agency that it will be a "mickey mouse" affair which will have no effect.

Roberts Bank Expansion Opposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The proposed expansion of the nearby Roberts Bank port should be terminated and 4,000 acres of back-up land permanently locked into agriculture, the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society said Sunday.

SPEC said in a news release, the land, owned by the British Columbia Harbors Board and leased to farmers on a short-term basis, is prime farmland and part of the .02 per cent of B.C. that is class one agricultural land.

The environmental group said the land should be transferred to the B.C. Land Commission and placed in a special permanent agricultural land reserve.

PROJECT TO GO AHEAD

dent the project will meet its target dates.

"They are on schedule as far as we are concerned," he said. "They have 59 lots ready to go on the market once they clean up the sites."

Berikoff said the municipality is aware that there is little demand for lots at this time but some of them would sell if they came on the market.

Liens totalling $650,000 have been issued against the project by three excavation companies.

Meanwhile, the Maple Bay Ratepayers Association expressed concern the project may be abandoned, leaving local taxpayers with a bill of more than $1 million.

Deane Russell, a spokesman for the association, said ratepayers would have to pay $143,000 towards the cost of a $680,000 sewer trunk line plus $136,000 of the $350,000 cost of widening Maple Bay Road. The road was widened down as far as the Kingsview development only.

Liens against the project were filed by Chew Excavating of Victoria for $259,529, by Wilson Contracting Ltd. of Victoria for $1,346, and by Discovery Land Services Ltd. for $397,616. All bills are for installing services and preparing the lots.

Israel Arming Ethiopia

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan admitted today that Israel has sold arms to Ethiopia.

Dayan made the statement to an Israel Radio correspondant in Zurich when he arrived for a meeting with Israeli ambassadors in Europe.

The interview was broadcast here later.

Dayan said there is no need to hide the fact that Israel is selling arms to Ethiopia, which is at war with Somalia.

It was the first official Israeli statement on the subject after reports from abroad had been consistently denied here.

Dayan said Israel has a clear interest in maintaining its long and friendly relations with Ethiopia, particularly because of that country's strategic position along a vital sea link to Israel.

But Dayan denied that Israel has sold aircraft to Ethiopia and said no Israeli soldiers are in that country.

Union Boss To Quit

Victoria Firefighters Union head Ross Cameron will be leaving labor ranks in the near future to take a job with the provincial government.

Cameron confirmed today that he intends to leave his position with the union but would say little beyond that.

"I'm not entirely sure of the scope of this new job. It has to do with labor-management relations, but I expect to get involved in other fields as well," he said.

Cameron said that he would make a statement on his new position after meetings to finalize the appointment Tuesday morning.

It is believed his new job is with the provincial government's B.C. Systems Corp.

And in another move, Victoria land commissioner Ken Wilkins confirmed today he plans to leave his $28,000 city hall post.

He declined to say why, or where he's going.

Wilkins said he's leaving his job as land commissioner, but met all other questions with a firm "no comment".

Teens Held After Break-In

The trio had taken liquor and chocolate bars.

Saanich police patrolling the area checked the pavilion and arrested a 17-year-old and two juveniles aged 15 and 16.

Little Time Left To Save B.C. Underwater Life

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

The scuba diver waved his arm in the direction of Bentinck Island, near Pedder Bay.

"There used to be ling cod, rock cod, octopi and many other forms of sea life down there," he said.

"It used to be a joy exploring the sea bottom. Then somehow the word got around it was a wonderful place for a swim.

"You should see the area now. Some irresponsible group cleaned up and the sea life has been wiped out."

That kind of complaint, rare 10 years ago, is now common and it is for this reason that Betty Pratt-Johnson of Vancouver, scuba diver and writer, has launched a campaign to establish underwater parks in B.C.

"We have got to get provincial and federal government authorities to establish underwater parks before it's too late," she says.

"We have got to protect areas rich in sea life from spearfishing, collectors and chemical effluents."

Pratt-Johnson, who was in Victoria to drum up support for parks beneath the sea, said she is extremely concerned at the damage to sea life caused by chemical pollutants.

In certain areas of Howe Sound, crabs and other forms of sea life are not edible because of mercury poisoning.

"Apart from pollutants, we have to protect our colorful and beautiful underwater habitats from people," she says.

To emphasize her point, she said there are now 2.5 million divers in North America and they are increasing at a rate of 200,000 a year.

This is both good news and bad news.

Increasing numbers of divers can only lead to further spoilage of underwater areas unless steps are taken to set some aside for pure recreation. Spearfishing and collecting would be prohibited in these area.

On the other hand, an increase will bring economic benifits to the province, she added.

"B.C. is becoming more and more widely known for its sea world. It won't be long before large numbers of people come to the coast to dive, especially in winter, and we need tourists in winter."

She said underwater parks would not only serve divers.

"In Japan, towers have been lowered into the sea in order to make the underwaterworld available to people who cannot even swim," she said.

"Sooner or later this this will come to B.C."

Pratt-Johnson said the response to a postcard campaign she waged for undersea parks was good.

The cards were attached to the January issue of Diver magazine, and asked readers what areas they would like to see protected.

She said B.C. Parks Branch director Tom Lee has told her underwater parks could be created instantly if the public indicated it wants them.

"Other countries have established marine parks. They bring tourist dollars. Why can't we do the same thing here?".

Energy Cover Up?

A group of six Vancouver Island environmental organizations today accused the federal government of jeopardizing the West Coast's environment by failing to establish a comprehensive energy policy.

The groups called for a restructuring of the National Energy Board and a resumption of oil port hearings.

In a joint news release the alliance said that the federal government has apparently cancelled the oil ports inquiry being conducted by Dr. Andrew Thompson.

And they charged that Ottawa is attempting a colossal cover-up by now sending the NEB across Canada to study oil supply and demand.

"The cover-up threatens both the coastal environment of B.C. and future energy security for the province," the groups claim

After several months of hearings the Thompson inquiry adjourned indefinitely in December because there were no active proposals to be considered at the time.

The Island groups, the Canadian Society of Environmental Biologists, Bluepeace (Sooke), Cleanshores, Clearwater, C.A.S.E./Bluepeace and the Sierra Club, also called on the federal government to restructure the NEB.

The environmentalists said the board should serve the long-term social, economic and environmental interests of all Canadians.

Seven Oaks' Use Only Temporary

Juvenile offenders occupying the Seven Oaks home for retarded children will likely remain there this week until alternative holding facilities are found, a corrections official said today.

Regional director of corrections W. R. Jack said he realizes the situation runs counter to a promise he made to Blenkinsop Valley residents last fall but said it cannot be helped because of overcrowding in regular confinement facilities.

Neighbors of the Seven Oaks institution near Cordova Bay Road in the Blenkinsop greenbelt area are disturbed by the fact that 11 youngsters and five supervisors from up-island are being housed in cottages comprising part of the Seven Oaks facility.

The cottages are supposed to provide accomodation for patients from the Glendale Hospital.

Juvenile authorities have run out of accommodation at the Greater Victoria juvenile detention home, which has space for 19 inmates.

"The symptom is overcrowding but we haven't determined why," Jack said.

His staff will be interviewing judges and juvenile officers to try to identify the problem, he said.

"I don't like them in Seven Oaks, we just can't stay in Seven Oaks."

But there are no alternative facilities available immediately and adult cells — even where they could be used for juvenile holding — are in heavy demand.

Jack said he appreciates the community is upset.

"I made a promise some months ago that I wouldn't use that facility and I've got to live up to that promise," he said.

"I'm going to have to ask their indulgence for at least this week.".

Letters were sent in November by the Saanich Greenbelt Association and the Blenkinsop Valley Ratepayers Association to Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis and Attorney-General Garde Gardom protesting the use of Seven Oaks for juvenile detention.

Too Late For Flu This Year

However, the bug will probably show up bright and early next flu season, Arneil said today.

Arneil said scientists are working on a vaccine that should minimize the danger of severe attacks by that time.

Experts worried when the influenza appeared in Russia last year after a 30-year absence because there is no known vaccine to fight it. The virus spread to central China and the United States but so far has not been reported in Canada.

Meanwhile, Victoria residents seem to be recovering from a bout of the Texas flu.

Absenteeism is down to five per cent in some schools compared with a rate of around 12 per cent last month.

MAYOR STUDIES AMBULANCE ISSUE

Communication Blamed

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said today he now believes the difficulties surrounding the provision of ambulance service in the municipality mainly stem from a "communication problem" which he is taking steps to resolve.

The comment appeared to reflect a softening of the mayor's earlier stand on the matter.

Last week he said that criticism of the Saanich municipal ambulance service by the provincial government's emergency health services commission (EHSC) was unwarranted.

The EHSC, which is scheduled to assume responsibility for ambulance service to Saanich residents April 1, had cited an incident last week in which a Saanich crew responded to a suicide call in the same building as the provincial agency's Burnside station, without notifying station personnel.

The suicide report turned out to be a false alarm.

Couvelier said today that he and Ald. Robert Cameron, chairman of Saanich council's fire and emergency committee, spent several hours Saturday monitoring the provincial emergency operation and talking with supervisory personnel.

Couvelier said they gleaned considerable background information and he was "impressed with the integrity of EHSC personnel and their operation."

"I really see it as a communication problem," he added. "We will have to follow this up to see how we can improve co-ordination."

As a first step, he and Cameron met this afternoon with Saanich fire department officials.

Meanwhile, Esquimalt Ald. Colin Blair said Saturday that Saanich should be allowed to retain responsibility for providing ambulance service to its residents, and the provincial ambulances "should be moved elsewhere."

He said whatever the outcome of the tussle between Saanich and the province as to which agency should provide the service, "it is blatantly obvious overlapping of services is inevitable."

To overcome the problem, he said, the provincial service should be removed from Saanich and relocated to an area where it would provide a primary rather than a secondary service.

WOMAN HURT HELPING DOG

Going to the aid of an injured dog cost 20-year-old Marilyn Lukey a broken knee, broken ankle and possible concussion when she was struck by a car on Burnside Saturday night at 6:20.

Saanich police said the woman, of 885 Craigflower, helped the dog which had just been struck by another car and was kneeling in the street at the intersection of Milgrove. The driver stood by and tried to wave down an oncoming car.

The second car, driven by Daniel Richard Gross, 17, of 913 Rankin, avoided the first car but struck Lukey.

She was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital where her condition today is good.

Neighborhood Council Starts

Saanich council takes the mountain to Mahomet tonight when it holds the first of a series of regular council meetings in various neighborhood centres to encourage community participation in civic affairs.

Furnace Blows Up

Windows shattered and a wall was shifted when the furnace blew up at Parkside Gardens, 3598 Tillicum, at 3:30 a.m. Sunday.

Saanich firemen estimated repairs would cost between $4,000 and $5,000 in the small, separate furnace room to which the explosion was confined.

Chief Harold Gains said it appeared an electrode of the firing mechanism failed in the twin-boiler hot water heating plant, allowing raw vaporized fuel oil to fill combustion chambers.

The Miracle Of Flight . . .

Miracle will be moved from the pool at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel to her new holding tank at Sealand by helicopter, Sealand manager Angus Matthews said on the weekend.

The helicopter transfer means the whale will be disturbed for only about eight minutes, five of them airborne, in comparison with transportation by truck which would take at least an hour and require a crane at each end.

Miracle probably will be the first whale to be moved by helicopter. A Los Angeles aquarium has considered using one and is expected to send an observer to see how the airlift works.

Miracle's last medical was more than a month ago. Matthews says there were no problems then and her behavior indicates a stable condition.

Her 380,000-gallon holding tank next to Haida's is nearing completion and a made-to-measure sling will be made for the helicopter airlift.

Atop the Spar, a Winged Mercury

WE WERE POKING about on the Sechelt Peninsula last week when I spotted a friend from long ago. It soared out of an area of smashed and trampled greenery — a top-rigged wooden spar tree with a logging donkey-engine huffing and puffing in its shadow.

In today's highly-mechanized woods, a natural spar tree is a sight so rare that I'd never thought to look on one again. It's quite a few years now since the Madill steel spar, truck-mounted, took over the job of elevating the blunt noses of the incoming logs above the slash.

I drove on, pleased to know that the art of rigging a spar-tree has not vanished from the earth, and that at least one practising highrigger still plies his spectacular trade.

There were more dangerous jobs than high-rigging on the railway logging shows of my youth. Train brakemen, squirreling along the peaked and swaying log-loads on breakneck curves, lived on borrowed time. And for a loader, the margin between life and death among the flying logs was always narrow.

Even so, a glamor attached itself to the high-rigger. He was a special person, a man apart, to whom legends accrued. It was his job to fashion a carefully-selected tree into a spar, to hang the rigging on it, and to service it while it remained in use.

Prospective spar trees were chosen with an eye to location when the grades for the logging railway branches and spurs were laid out.

The tree selected was marked with an 'X' chopped into its bark, a sign to the incoming falling sets that it was to be spared. In due time, the highrigger would come out from camp with his climbing belt and spurs, his short-handled axe and his one-man crosscut saw, and take the tree in hand.

Once in my years as waterboy to the gods, I happened along a newly-laid grade on fire patrol to find Larson, the camp highrigger, addressing himself to an 'X'-marked tree.

He flipped his wire-cored climbing rope around the trunk, secured it to his belt with a rigger's hitch, then started up with axe and saw dangling from their beltlines.

It looked easy. But, watching him hitch his way up the tall, straight column of the trunk, I knew from misguided climbing experiments of my own how brutally the strain came on arms and legs.

Arrived at the first limb, 90 feet or thereabouts up, Larson disappeared from sight. I could hear his axe woodpeckering away; presently a massive limb floated out and down.

He lined up his axe and began with deliberate strokes to chop out his undercut.

Much could go wrong. The top could split, crushing him in his climbing rope. Or it could kick back from its elevated stump and wipe him off the spar. There was also the moment when the severed top let go, and the man clinging below his cut was whipped savagely to and fro.

It was a virtuoso performance. To it, he added something more . . . a signature flourish. He slipped his rope, clambered to the flat-sawed top of the spar, and unsupported in space, proceeded to stage a show.

He became the discus thrower, then Napoleon with hand thrust inside his jacket and one foot advanced. And finally, winged Mercury, balanced with an arm and a leg extended in an attitude of flight. All this for an audience of a few deep-woods ravens, and one pop-eyed, properly worshipful boy on the grade below.

I found an excuse to drive back to that Sechelt spar-tree, hoping the rigger would ride up on the pass-line to swing the blocks. But he didn't; and even if he had, I doubt he'd have treated us to a winged Mercury.

Bob Finds Joy In Final Shot

Bob Burrows, playing with a badly-puffed eye suffered the previous night, sank a foul shot with no time left on the clock to give DataTech an 84-83 decision Sunday after the Victoria club opened with a 106-99 triumph Saturday.

The Sunday game was topsy-turvy the whole way. DataTech was down 16 points in the first 10 minutes of play but came back to take a 42-41 lead at half time. Then Yakima pulled away again in the early part of the second half and was ahead 79-68 with just under five minutes left on the clock.

Burrows, who didn't play the final half of the game Saturday after being taken to hospital for treatment of an elbow-inflicted cut under his left eye, scored 16 points before being sidelined and contributed 15 to the DataTech offence Sunday.

Yakima, down 12 points with less than five minutes to go Saturday, started hitting from the outside but failed to get the equalizer before time ran out.

DataTech had a 60 per cent shooting effort Saturday.

Ken Shields, who also had a great game defensively, and Mike Gains led the Victoria attack Sunday with 16 points each while Brian MacKenzie also hit for double figures with 12.

Gordie Hoshal (8), Dave Mulcahy (7), Brent Mullin (6) and Jim Duddridge (4) competed the scoring.

Borton led Yakima Sunday with 26 points and Stan Nybo contributed 19.

On Saturday, MacKenzie and Duddridge were the top marksmen with 21 points apiece while Mulcahy chipped in 18 and Hoshal hit for double figures with 11.

The two wins give DataTech a 7-9 record for the season with only two league games remaining. The Victoria club finishes off at home to the Equitable Falcons, Feb. 17 and 18.

Next weekend, DataTech will compete in the annual Renton invitational tournament.

BAYS EDGE AUSSIES IN KELOWNA FINALE

KELOWNA — Oak Bay Bays nipped Bulleen-Templestowe of Australia 66-65 Saturday to win their third Western Canada high school boys' basketball tournament in five years.

Ken Kirzinger, who was later voted the most valuable player and selected to the all-star team, led Bays in the final with 27 points while Wayne Andrews added 15.

Kelly Dukeshire of Bays was also named to the all-stars, Andrews was picked as a runner-up and clubmate Tih Tan received honorable mention.

The Australian team, an all-star squad from the vicinity of Melbourne, led 30-28 at half time.

Nanaimo Islanders, who lost their first game of the season to the Aussies on Friday night, downed Vancouver College Fighting Irish in the battle for third place.

Chemainus Pulls Out of Basement

CHEMAINUS — Chemainus Blues snapped a tie for last place in the South Island Big Six Hockey League with Juan de Fuca Merchants by downing the latter club 7-2 Saturday at Fuller Lake Arena.

Peter Lemon scored twice to lead Blues, who held period leads of 2-0 and 5-1, and singles were added by Craig Neeser, Jim Kipp, Wade Smith, Rod Hunter and Burt Steen. Brice Charlong and Dale Sanche replied for Merchants.

East Germans Sweep Singles

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — Defending European champion Annett Poetzsch gave East Germany its second gold medal of the European figure skating championships Saturday night by narrowly taking the ladies final free skate event in the singles competition.

Second place went to West Germany's Dagmar Lurz, who had finished two places ahead of Poetzsch in the short program and executed a beautiful cross-foot spin in compiling 19 ordinals and 186.10 points.

Third was Elena Vodorezova of the Soviet Union with 39 ordinals and 180.42 points.

Poetzsch, 17, over the three days of ladies competition was inconstent. She won a perfect nine ordinals Thursday in the figures and then placed a low sixth the next day in the short program.

In the free skate Saturday night, she included impressively a butterfly jump, spread-eagle, and a triple salchcow but fell during linking steps 20 seconds before the end of the routine.

Switzerland's Denise Bielmann, 15, won the free skate with an exceptional performance despite the rough ice and was the only girl in the field of 22 to execute four different triple jumps and win the only perfect 6.0.

For the Soviets, who took both the pairs and dance crowns here in a repeat of last year's championships in Helsinki, Vodorezova was the best-placed ever Russian in the ladies-singles event.

This year's competition drew renewed heavy criticism of the judges from the press and the public in the 8,000-seat stadium for failure to penalize irregularites in Friday's ice dancing and for generally over-rating the top performers.

Policeman Kayos Bobick

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Kallie Knoetze, an unknown Pretoria policeman, unleashed a smoking right hook Saturday to knock out Duane Bobick of the United States in the third round of a scheduled 10-round heavyweight bout.

A crowd of about 40,000 went wild at Rand Stadium as the underdog Knoetze stopped the American rated No. 5 heavyweight in the world.

Calgary, UVic Squads On a Collision Course

Three of the four playoff berths in the Canada West University Athletic Association basketball leagues have been decided. University of Victoria teams have snapped the lock on two, Calgary has clinched a third spot and is bidding to claim the other one.

That's the picture after both Calgary and Victoria sweep their weekend games and each team has four games to play.

Victoria's Vikings and the Dinosaurs have wrapped up the men's berths.

Vikettes have wrapped up first place in the women's league and the Dinnies grabbed the inside track in the race for the second spot by defeating Saskatchewan 72-60 Saturday to complete a crucial sweep over the Huskiettes.

Calgary moved two points ahead of Alberta and four ahead Saskatchewan as a result of weekend action.

The Mike Gallo-coached Vikettes thumped Alberta 88-60 to drop the Pandas to third. In the Saturday's other game, Lethbridge ran its win streak to three straight and dropped UBC into the cellar by tripping the Thunderettes 58-49.

Scoring leader Carol Turney sparked Vikettes with 27 points while Luanne Hebb (18), Leslie Godfrey (12) and Marg Mainwaring (10) also hit in the double figures at Edmonton. Vikettes led 53-32 at the half in running their three-year undefeated streak to 56 games, including 16 this year.

As they did on Friday, the Golden Bears gave Vikings a battle before Chris Hebb turned things around with two key baskets. Vikings led 47-42 at the half and started to pull away until Alberta, with a late charge, closed to within five points with about two minutes to play. Hebb, who finished with 10 points, hit on two successive jump shots and the Vikings controlled play the rest of the way.

Calgary wrapped up its playoff berth in the men's league by overwhelming Saskatchewan 115-49. Calgary now is 10 points ahead of UBC, which suffered its second straight setback in Lethbridge, 68-62.

Smith Sparks East All-Stars

ATLANTA (AP) — John Havlicek wasn't surprised. Neither was Jack Ramsay.

"I sort of had a feeling if anyone would turn it around, it would be Randy Smith," said Havlicek, the retiring star of the Boston Celtics.

"What you saw him (Smith) do today, I've seen him do many times," said Ramsay, who watched helplessly as the cat-quick Buffalo Braves guard scored 14 points in the fourth quarter, leading the East to a 133-125 comeback victory over Ramsay's West squad in the 28th National Basketball Association All-Star Game on Sunday.

The West had dominated play until Smith took charge, aided by the aggressive rebounding of Boston's Dave Cowens and Philadelphia's Julius Erving, to erase a 12-point West lead in the final 10 minutes.

Smith scored six straight baskets, two on layups and four on jump shots from the 14-foot to 22-foot range, chopping the lead to 113-112 with 5:42 remaining, and Erving put the East ahead for only the second time in the game, this time for good, on a three-point play with 5:10 to go.

Playing despite five personal fouls with seven minutes remaining, Smith started the rally that resulted in a stretch of 15 consecutive East points, which eventually carried to a 21-2 edge, changing a 113-104 deficit to a 125-115 lead as the East captured its third All-Star Game in four years and its 18th against 10 defeats.

FATHER, SON SUSPENDED

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Ernie McLean, president of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League, announced Friday the suspensions of Bellingham Blazers' coach Don Berry and his son, Ken, for one game.

He said the suspensions resulted from infractions at a game in Penticton Jan. 20 in which Berry demonstrated lack of control of his club and centre Ken Berry was first man off the bench in a fight.

DEBBIE BEATS FLU TO SET MEET MARK

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Debbie Brill of Aldergrove, B.C., overcame Joni Huntley of the Pacific Coast Track Club and the flu for the second consecutive night as she soared six feet, two inches to set a high jump meet record at the Albuquerque-Jaycee invitational Saturday night.

Brill cleared the mark on her third run at the bar after Huntley had bowed out of the competition. Brill failed in three attempts at 6-4.

She had gone 6-3¼ Friday night at the Times Indoor Games in Los Angeles to beat Huntley in that meet.

Another Canadian, Bryan Saunders of Toronto, finished fourth in the men's 400-yard dash with a time of 52.36 seconds. Charles Dramiga, a native of Uganda competing for the University of New Mexico, won the event in 49.10.

Dwight Stones of the Desert Oasis Track Club won the men's high jump with a leap of seven feet, four inches. Canada's Greg Joy of Vancouver was second at 7-2.

Colorado Flyers mile relay team ran a blistering 3: 47.3 to set a women's world indoor mark, snapping the old standard of 3: 47.5.

John Stubbs in Front

John Stubbs amassed 372 points to win the Victoria and District elementary schools swim meet Saturday at Crystal Pool.

The Glenlyon-St. Margaret's team placed second with 308 and was followed closely by another combined squad from St. Michael's University School and Norfolk House at 302½.

Sangster was fourth at 232 and was followed by Colwood (148), Metchosin (137), Frank Hobbs (123), Glanford (116), Torquay (93), Glen Lake (77), Hillcrest (69), Saanichton (51½) and Willway (17).

Amazing Flavour Breakthrough

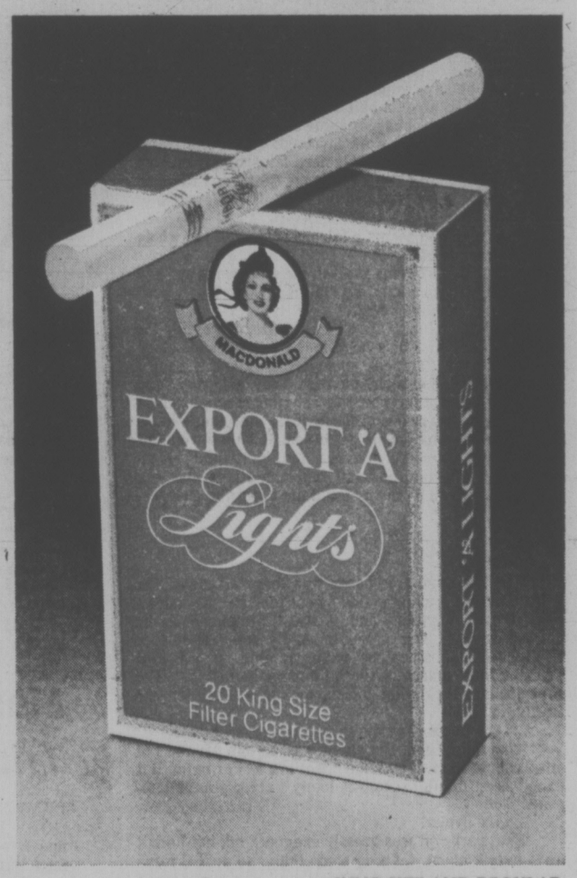
"Gentled Tobacco" gives Export 'A' Lights new dimensions of taste combining total flavour with never-before lightness.

They said it couldn't be done. No cigarette, they said, could combine complete flavour with a smooth light smoke.

This remarkable cigarette does it. The flavour is there, full and rich. But without a trace of harshness.

Fine, full-flavoured tobacco, gentled and blended as never before, make Export 'A' Lights unlike any other cigarette. A cigarette with a new kind of gentle strength. A cigarette that goes beyond words and must be tasted to be believed.

It's the one cigarette that's just right.



KING SIZE AND REGULAR

Export 'A' Lights.

The first just right cigarette.

New Champ Not Short of Confidence

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Heather Kemkaran would like you to know she's five feet and one-quarter inch tall.

"And make sure you get that quarter inch down," she requested.

In point of fact, however, Heather Kemkaran doesn't need to beg for precisness in order to stand out. The 18-year-old Toronto miss stands taller than any other Canadian girl who likes skating.

Displaying the confidence of a seven-foot bully, and with talent to match, Kemkaran was clearly the best in the field as she wrapped up the women's singles title when the Canadian figure skating championships came to a close at Memorial Arena on Saturday.

After taking a commanding lead with an excellent performance in Friday's compulsory short program, Kemkaran declared: "This was one of my best performances."

On Saturday, after the freeskate finale, she suggested: "I have as much content in my program as any of the Europeans," adding that her goal in the world championships is fifth place. She was 13th last year in Tokyo.

Kemkaran's confidence is refreshing, without braggadocio, and just the kind athletes need to get to the top.

Second to Lynn Nightingale last year, Kemkaran finished first in all three categories of the women's competition.

As in the men's singles, the battle was for second place and Cathie MacFarlane, the 1977 junior champion, managed to edge fellow Calgarian Peggy McLean despite being outskated in the free program and winding up with more ordinals and fewer points.

Another Calgary skater, Brian Pockar, took the men's championship and helped the west avoid complete embarassment. Ontario skaters were overpowering in the four-day event by claiming nine of the 12 gold medals.

The west's only other champions also were men — junior winner Dennis Coi and novice champ Ronni Unrau, both of the North Shore Club in North Vancouver.

It took a second-place finish by Vern Taylor of Toronto, a dazzling free skater, to provide the suspense and drama on the final day. Taylor, a distant seventh after the compulsory school figures, completed his climb to second place behind Pockar by easily winning the free skating.

Pockar, runner-up to Ron Shaver a year ago, put on a solid if not spectacular free-skating performance. Although he finished second in all three parts of the men's competition—figures, short program and free skating—he had built up enough of a lead to withstand Taylor's onslaught.

Not so fortunate was Jimmy Szabo of Coquitlam, who won the figures but came up with flawed short programs and free skating to slip to third place over-all.

Szabo was a picture of disappointment as he skated off after his free-skating program in which he fell twice. He knew he had missed his chance to represent Canada at next month's world championships in Ottawa, an honor that goes to Pockar and Taylor and the top two finishers in each of the other three senior competitions.

With all four senior crowns vacant for the first time in 29 years, the 1978 Canadians might have been a study in suspense except that the favorites came through confidently in the women's singles, the pairs and dance.

Sherri Baier of Mitchell, Ont., and Robin Cowan of Waterloo, Ont., who went to the 1977 worlds and finished 10th after placing only second in the Canadian junior competition, led throughout the pairs competition although Sherri was skating with a cast on a suspected wrist fracture and was in some pain from tendonitis in her heel.

Lee-Ann Jackson of Brantford, Ont., and Paul Mills of Cambridge, Ont., placed second, giving Kerry Leitch, coach at the Preston Figure Skating Club, a 1-2 finish in pairs besides three other gold medallists. Susan Gowan and Eric Thomsen of North Vancouver were third.

Lorna Wighton of Toronto and John Dowding of Oakville, Ont., second to since-retired Susan Carscallen and Eric Gillies a year ago, led the dance competition throughout, followed by Patricia Fletcher and Michael de la Penotiere of Toronto and last year's junior champions Marie McNeil, of Halifax, and Robert McCall, of Dartmouth, N.S.

Many Questions Still Unanswered

The Great Parachute Squabble is three weeks old now and the essential facts haven't changed. In winning the world championship last November in Australia, certain members of the Canadian team acted like irresponsible jerks.

From all reports, it seems equally true that some of them didn't.

Insults were exchanged with members of other teams on a bus in the terminal in Brisbane. One Canadian team member dropped his drawers and placed his bare rear end against the bus window for the education of passers-by. During their stay at the championships, the Canadians flew a skull-and-crossbones pennant along with the Canadian flag. There was a suggestion that drugs were involved.

No action was taken by the people in charge of the team, or by those running the competition. The chutists were named Canada's amateur sports team of the year for 1977.

Two months later, the Canadian Sports Parachuting Association blew the whistle, suspending the entire team for two years. The team-of-the-year award was taken away and given to the world junior curling champions from Charlottetown.

The parachutists became justifiably infamous. In my own small way I helped, pointing out that people shouldn't be wearing a Canadian jacket when they aren't smart enough to keep their pants up.

I also raised a question that hasn't yet been answered:

Why did everyone on the team get nailed? There were eight people on it and, apparently, only two whose conduct would warrant suspension. So why weren't the two suspended and sent home? Why were all eight tarred with the same brush? I'd still like to know. So would Mike Quinn.

* * *

Mike Quinn is 26 years old, and a member of that parachute team. I do not buy everything he says in defence of the team's conduct in Australia— but then, he doesn't defend that much of it. What he does say is that he and several others on the team did nothing to warrant the suspension or the resulting heat.

"One or two guys, sure," he says. "I don't know whether I'd have sent them home or anything, but they could have been reprimanded more than they were, and warned that if anything else happened they would be sent home. But nothing was done—nothing—until two months after we got home. Why did everybody have to take the rap?"

I have no way of knowing whether Quinn was lily white in Australia or up to his eyes in booze, of which he admits there was no noticeable shortage. The incidents on ths bus, he says, might never have happened "if we hadn't each had about a half bottle of scotch."

But the way the charges came out it seems apparent that not all eight men were involved. Quinn and teammate Graham Taylor of Abbotsford felt strongly enough about it to file a libel suit against the CSPA and Richard "Buzz" Bennett, who headed the Canadian delegation to Australia.

So the question seems a fair one: why did the whole team take the rap?

For Quinn, a systems analyst, the suspension has had a backlash: the publicity, he claims, has seriously hurt his chances for employment.

He quit his job in May to concentrate on training for the championships. He's been making the rounds since his return "But they look on my resume and it says I haven't worked for eight months. They ask why, and when I say I was at the world parachuting championships they say 'Oh, you're one of those guys!' and that's it."

All right, some people got hosed. But they wouldn't have if the team—collectively and individually—had acted more like international representatives and less like a mob on a pub crawl. So tell me about the charges.

* * *

"The skull-and-crossbones was there all right," he said. "We flew it with the flag by our tent. But it wasn't a protest over anything and it wasn't intended to be disrespectful. It was given to us by some people in Coolidge, Ariz., when we were training. It was our pennant, our mascot. All the teams had them. The Americans were flying theirs, too. It was called the Horny Gorilla."

And the insults and the rump display on the bus?

"They happened. But there was no one around but other competitors. It was like it was in a locker room. If it hadn't been for the scotch it likely wouldn't have happened."

And the drugs?

"That part of it was grossly exaggerated, but I don't want to talk about it. I said some things to a CBC radio person I know, and she didn't tell me I was being taped until the interview was over. It got on the air and it shouldn't have."

Quinn maintains that part of the problem was misunderstanding because the Canadians raised their own money and went with an advanced case of the shorts.

"We didn't arrive with an entourage of girlfriends and matching track suits and cars," he said. "We wore cutoff jeans and 'Sport Death' T-shirts. They had cars, we had a moving van. Among the other jumpers we were called 'loose, fun people'. The officials saw the same things and called us 'loose, undisciplined hell-raisers'."

Personally, I think the truth lies somewhere between the reports and Quinn's admittedly biased viewpoint. But on one point he is dead right.

The suspension hit everyone. The team has not been granted a hearing or given a chance to defend itself. The CSPA had the guts to bring the thing to the public eye in the first place. It would seem only fair to hear them out and put the blame only where it belongs.

Cougars' Streak Sliced by Blades

Times News Services

Victoria Cougars' bubble finally burst Sunday.

Undefeated in their last seven Western Canada Hockey League games, including six on the road, the Cougars stumbled on some of their own sins to allow Saskatoon Blades to skate off with a 6-3 victory in Saskatoon.

Seattle tripped Medicine Hat Tigers 7-6 Saturday and then defeated Lethbridge Broncos 6-2 Sunday to move two points ahead of the Cougars in their battle for second place in the Western Division. The Breakers also have three games in hand.

"I guess they were overdue," Victoria coach Jack Shupe said after Sunday's loss. "I don't know if it was over-confidence or the travelling that caught up to them, but they didn't skate, hit or shoot with the authority they showed in the past few weeks.

"If you wanted an early sign, you could see it in the first three penalties they took. All were for infractions away from the play."

Brent Ashton opened scoring for Saskatoon while Victoria defenceman Leroy Heck was serving the game's first penalty. Franco Disciglio added two more power-play goals for the Blades later in the game as Saskatoon broke open a 3-3 game with three unanswered goals in the final period.

Ken Federko also scored two for the Blades, both in the final frame, and Dan Bent added the other.

Dennis Fenske, Curt Fraser and Gary Lupul scored for the Cougars, who play two games in Billings this week before returning home for a Saturday game against Brandon Wheat Kings.

Despite the six goals he allowed, Victoria goalie Steve Amiss turned in a strong performance. He turned away 39 shots while rival Ken McNabb stopped 21.

Cougars took 10 of the 18 minor penalties and the only misconduct — that to Heck for kicking the puck out of the reach of a linesman as he prepared to pick it up.

A game scheduled Sunday in Regina between the Pats and Medicine Hat had to be postponed when the Tigers had to stop at Gull Lake because of extremely dagerous driving conditions in southern Saskatchewan.

Left winger Brian Propp checked in wit six points, including two goals, to power Brandon to an 8-5 victory over the Wranglers in Calgary.

At New Westminster, Portland Winter Hawks built up an early 4-1 lead and then held on to edge the Bruins 5-3. Welcomed by the Cougars, the result kept the Bruins in last place, four points behind Victoria.

The Hawks unleashed a whopping 63 shots on the New Westminster net while the Bruins managed only 27 before a sellout crowd of 5,190.

The penalty-filled contest, in which 89 minutes were assessed to the Bruins and 87 to the Winter Hawks, was highlighted by the ejection of New Westminster coach Ernie McLean in the first period.

Mexico Gets Split In Volleyball Finals

University of Mexico captured the men's title but lost out to Canada in the women's final of the annual University of Victoria international invitational volleyball tournament Sunday.

The men's final in the three-day tourney turned into a 2½-hour marathon struggle before Mexico finally defeated B.C. Olympics, 11-15, 16-14, 15-8, 11-15, 15-8.

Mexico made the final by upsetting University of Manitoba Bisons 11-15, 15-13, 15-13. Bisons, who boast several national team members in their lineup, won the first game and were ahead 8-2 in the second when Mexico caught fire.

Olympics downed Mac of Portland 9-15, 15-7, 16-14 in the other semi-final.

In the battle for third place, Bisons topped Mac, 15-5, 15-4.

Eduardo Malpiea and Jorge Caliz of Mexico, Mike Sayers and Randy Wagner of Olympics, John Littleman of Seattle Smash and Mark Kolodziej of the University of Calgary were named to the all-star team. Keith Gallicano of Olympics was selected as the tourney's most valuable player.

Loris Campagnolo of the UVic Vikings was named as a runner-up.

Superior height, coupled with the experience offered by three Vancouver girls who played in the last Olympic Games — Audrey Vandervelden, Carol Bishop and Patty Olson — paved the way for Canada's 15-2, 15-10, 15-2 decision over Mexico in the women's final.

In the semis, Canada topped Chimo of Vancouver 15-6, 11-15, 15-4 while Mexico ousted Portland Punch, 15-9, 15-4.

Chimo defeated Punch 15-10, 15-8 in the battle for third place.

Louise Harrison of UVic Vikettes was named to the all-stars along with Veronica Aquilar and Sampedro Carmen of Mexico, Liz Vidoni and Coleen Cole of Chimo and Karen Haberlach of Portland Volleyball Club.

Danyra Aragon of Mexico was named the most valuable player and two other Victorians, Darlene Leung of Victoria "Y" and Sue Cross of Victoria Spice, were runners-up in the all-star voting.

Marathon to Nowhere Triumph for Porsches

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Rolf Stommelen, Toine Hezemans and Peter Gregg teamed to nurse their dying Porsche 935 turbo to victory Sunday in the 24 Hours of Daytona, as Porsches swept all but one of the first 16 top places.

It was a record fourth victory for Gregg, who spent less than an hour behind the wheel.

Gregg, who had won twice for Porsche and once for BMW in the last four runnings of this gruelling "marathon to nowhere," declined to join his team-mates in Victory Circle, saying: "The full credit should go to Toine and Rolf. They did all the work."

Gregg, who entered a two-car team, spent most of his time in the car he started, even though it was out of contention after a one hour, 45-minute engine change early Sunday.

It finished a distant ninth, losing eighth place to a Ferrari on the last lap as co-driver Brad Friselle slowed to join a throng of Porsches for a photogenic finish.

SKATE BRASS EYES FUTURE IN SELECTIONS

With 1978 clearly not a bumper year for the country's figure skating crop, the Canadian Figure Skating Association is realistically eyeing the future.

And with any luck, the association reasons, Canada should have a bountiful harvest by the time the 1980 Winter Olympics come into view.

While Wainman, a four-foot-four, 60-pound Mississauga, Ont., youngster who free-skates with a poise which belies her age and size, will not be ready for the Olympics in just two years, some of this year's new batch of senior champions could be in winning form.

The 1978 national championships were distinguished by the fact that none of last year's senior champions were returning to defend their titles. Many of 1977's other top performers were also missing.

The CFSA passed up Canada's top two juniors in picking Wainman as one of two women to represent the country in the world junior championships in France next month. Lorri Baier, 14, of Mitchell, Ont., the new novice champion, was the other choice.

Baier finished a solid first in the novices, while Wainman finished fourth, but was the top free skater.

Patti Black of London, Ont., and Sandra Leighton, of Richmond were the top two junior women not picked for the team.

The association gave no reasons for its selections.

The only other surprise in the world team was in the junior men's category, where Daniel Beland of Montreal, second-place finisher in the junior men was overlooked in favor of the third-place finisher, Brian Orser of Penetang, Ont. Beland was defending world junior champion.

The senior team for the world championships next month in Ottawa went pretty well according to form.

Following are the Canadian teams:

SENIOR TEAM

Men—Brian Pockar, 18, Calgary, and Vern Taylor, 19, Toronto.

JUNIOR TEAM

Women—Baier and Wainman.
Men—Dennis Coi, 16, Coquitlam, and Orser.
Pairs—Barbara Underhill, 14, Oshawa and Paul Martini, 17, Woodbridge; Lorri Baier and Lloyd Eisler, 14, Seaforth, Ont.

Late Goal Gives Bruins Tie With Leafs

By Canadian Press

The scene was set: Dave Williams of Toronto Maple Leafs was in the penalty box. Boston Bruins goaltender Gerry Cheevers was on the bench in favor of a sixth attacker with Toronto leading 3-2.

Enter Greg Sheppard, already with one goal to his credit in the National Hockey League game Sunday night.

Stan Weir had given the Maple Leafs a 3-2 lead with his first goal of the season late in the second period when his shot glanced off the stick of Boston defenceman Brad Park.

Weir, recalled from Toronto's Tulsa Oilers affiliate in the Central Hockey League, snapped the puck out from behind the Boston net and Park was the goat.

Ian Turnbull and Darryl Sittler teamed up twice for a 2-0 Toronto lead in the first period. Sittler set up Turnbull for a 45-foot scoring blast before Turnbull reciprocated by doing the legwork on Sittler's 26th goal of the season.

The Bruins tied it with a pair of goals in an 80-second span of a fast-paced second period in which Boston outshot Toronto 14-3. Palmateer faced a total of 38 Boston shots.

In other games, New York Rangers downed Colorado Rockies 6-3, Buffalo Sabres beat Washington Capitals 4-1 and Detroit Red Wings nipped Cleveland Barons 4-3.

In games Saturday, Montreal Canadiens extended their undefeated streak to 20 games with a 5-5 tie with Los Angeles Kings, Philadelphia Flyers tied Cleveland 2-2, Boston pummelled Pittsburgh Penguins 8-1, Detroit tied Toronto 2-2, Chicago Black Hawks dumped Vancouver Canucks 5-1, Buffalo defeated Minnesota North Stars 4-2, New York Islanders whipped Washington 6-1, Colorado tied Atlanta Flames 2-2 and the Rangers tied St. Louis Blues 2-2.

Walt Tkaczuk scored two goals and added two assists, including a pass to Ron Greschner for the game-winning goal, as the Rangers snapped a seven-game winless streak with their home-ice victory over Colorado.

CFL PRESIDENT RAPS WEST CLUBS

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian Football League president Bill Hodgson says he'll seek changes in the league constitution if Western Conference owners block the sale of Hamilton Tiger-Cats to Harold Ballard.

Hodgson, majority owner of Toronto Argonauts, supports Ballard's purchase of the Ticats from Hamilton businessman Michael DeGroote. Other Eastern Conference owners have also indicated they will vote in favor of the sale but some Western clubs have voiced objections.

The sale to the owner of the National Hockey League Toronto Maple Leafs requires approval of seven of the nine CFL clubs.

Hodgson said in a telephone interview Sunday that he has asked league commissioner Jake Gaudaur to review the constitution to determine whether EFC clubs have a vote in the appointments of WFC club presidents.

"The privately-owned eastern clubs cannot afford to be dictated to by the community-owned clubs from the West," said Hodgson. "I have made this point to the commissioner and the matter will be discussed at our annual meeting next week.

Hodgson said he felt that if the WFC clubs can say who should have financial control of a privately-owned eastern club, then the EFC owners should have the same right in the West. In the past, individual WFC clubs have appointed their own presidents.

He said some of the WFC club presidents have no investment in the league. "They are one-year wonders. They are opposing Harold to come across as community heroes. Nobody should be considering blocking this man."

Carmichael, Horrigan Gain Final

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Rinks skipped by Gord Carmichael of Victoria Curling Club and Tim Horrigan of the Racquet Club will represent Vancouver Island in the British Columbia mixed curling championships at Nelson, Feb. 17-19.

Carmichael won his berth Saturday night at Victoria Curling Club by coming from behind to defeat Horrigan in the "A" final, 10-8, while Horrigan gained his berth with a 10-6 victory over Gwyn Hughes of Duncan in the "B" final Sunday.

Hughes gained the "B" final with a 14-4 victory over his Duncan clubmate, Glen Harper, Sunday morning, following a 9-4 victory over Ray Benwell of Playland Saturday. Horrigan qualified as the defeated "A" finalist. Harper eliminated Norm Thiessen of Nanaimo 8-7 on Saturday.

It is the second straight year that Carmichael and his rink of third Lea Corke, second Doug Benedict and lead Fran Schauerte have represented the Island in the provincial mixed final.

For Horrigan, victory also marks a double. Just last weekend at Powell River he came from out of "B" side to capture a berth in the Pacific Coast Curling Association men's playdowns which will take place at Vancouver Curling Club, Feb. 10-12.

Curling with Horrigan were third Colleen Robertson, second Don Nemeth and lead Linda Hildebrand.

In Sunday's "B" event, Hughes took a 4-1 lead over Horrigan after two ends but then ran into trouble. He just couldn't buy a shot and before he got the chalk again in the eighth end, Horrigan had jumped into a 10-4 lead. Key miss for Hughes came on the seventh when he came out inside while facing three Horrigan rocks and drifted by to the back of the house.

In the morning he could do little wrong in disposing of Harper.

On Saturday, Carmichael scored three in the eighth to tie Horrigan and then stole two in the ninth to set up the win.

Stenmark Scores Double

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, West Germany (AP) — Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden made up for an Olympic failure and Annemarie Moser-Proell led Austria back to the top in the week-long World Alpine Ski Championships which ended Sunday at this Bavarian resort.

Stenmark skied off with gold medals in both the special slalom and giant slalom for the most dazzling performance in the men's events.

Moser-Proell, the 24-year-old women's ace, won the downhill and combined events to lead Austria to the team title with a total of four gold medals.

West Germany and Liechtenstein, Europe's largest and smallest countries, proved they now are among the best Alpine nations.

Liechtenstein, the Alpine principality with 24,000 inhabitants, won a gold, two silver and two bronze medals. Three of the medals were won by the Wenzel family—Andreas taking the men's combined gold and a silver in giant slalom. His sister, Hanni, won a silver in the women's combined.

CURLING ROUNDUP

City Rink Slips In B.C. Final

Times News Services

A rink skipped by Heather Haywood of Richmond is the only undefeated foursome following four rounds of play in the British Columbia women's curling championships at Fort St. John.

Haywood won both her games Sunday to run her record to 4-0, while Helen Garraway of the Racquet Club of Victoria, who won two games on Saturday, dropped two decisions to slip back to third place with a 2-2 mark.

Garraway lost to Leila Johnson of Prince George, 10-3, and then was beaten 14-3 in seven ends by Ethel Graham of Cloverdale Sunday night.

On Saturday, Garraway surprised 1976 Canadian champion Lindsay Sparkes of Vancouver 7-5 as she stole five points on the first five ends in her first game. She reversed the procedure in the second game by falling behind 4-0 early and then coming from behind for a 7-6 victory over April Hall of Trail with a steal of one in the 10th end.

Johnson is second with a 3-1 mark while Hall and Graham are tied with Garraway at 2-2. The round-robin tournament continues today and Tuesday with the final draw scheduled Tuesday morning.

In Vancouver on Saturday, Craig Baase of Merritt captured the provincial boys' high school championship with a 7-0 record in the round-robin playdown. John McGowan of Mt. Douglas of Victoria finished with a 1-6 mark.

Meanwhile, two berths in the Canadian men's championship at Vancouver, March 5-11, have been decided.

In Newoundland, a rink from Goose Bay skipped by Bob Rowe won the provincial men's championship with a 3-2 victory over Wayne Hamilton of St. John's.

In Chatham, New Brunswick, Peter Murray skipped his Thistle-St. Andrews rink to the provincial championship with a final 5-4 victory over defending champion Rollie Mockler of Fredericton. Murray went through the 16-team double knockout bonspiel without a defeat.

In other playdowns, Ken May of Burstall gained a berth in the Saskatchewan provincial men's championship by defeating Garnet Campbell of Avonlea 6-5. May joins Lee Rogers of Regina who won the "A" side in the southern playdowns Saturday.

In Winnipeg, George Laudrum of Winnipeg Strathcona won the Manitoba senior men's championship with a 4-2 victory over clubmate Lyle Henry.

In Alma, Que., Jim Wilson of Lachine also earned a place in the Canadian senior men's final when he won the Quebec senior title with two victories over Lou Scullion of Alma, 10-2 and 11-5.

UVic Run Ended By Powell River

Only one of the teams was happy when two streaks were broken Sunday during first division play in the Vancouver Island Soccer League.

Duncan Powel's Men's Wear ended a three-game losing streak by tripping Victoria Athletics 4-1 at Blanchard Field and Powell River Villas ended University of Victoria Vikings' unbeaten streak by blanking the student side 2-0 in Powell River.

In other Sunday matches, Gorge Molsons and Oak Bay played to a scoreless deadlock at Heywood Avenue Park and Victoria West clipped Nanaimo City 2-0 at Topaz Park.

Bill Merriman, a juvenile up on a permit, scored the lone goal for Athletics at 12 minutes. Graham Gow notched the tying marker for Duncan at 40 minutes and then counted what proved to be the winner at the 60-minute mark. Pat Smith and Phil Dolan finished scoring for Duncan at 65 and 75 minutes.

At Powell River, Jim Veenhof scored at 20 minutes to give the home side a 1-0 halftime advantage and Brian Gomez scored the insurance tally at 85 minutes. Gomez recently returned from a two-year stay in Australia, where he managed to lead a local league in scoring.

Dan Wilmshurst was playing goal for Oak Bay and John Irrutagoyena was in goal for Gorge.

Bob Duncan figured in both goals for Victoria West. He scored the first at 17 minutes on an indirect free kick by John Maguire and later took an indirect free kick that Darryl Hooker converted into a goal with five minutes remaining.

Jim DeGoede chalked up the shutout for Wests, who finished with 10 players after Steve Moss was sent off for fighting at 75 minutes.

On Saturday, Gil McIlraith and Pierre Castellini scored two goals each to lead the Royals' attack and Mark Wyatt fired a single. Curtis Henry spoiled Steve Webb's shutout bid with a fine goal for Prospect Lake in the final minute.

Prospect Lake, back in the first division after topping the second division last season, has only four points and four matches left to play. The last two teams in each division are relegated.

13s Lucky for Hubie

HONOLULU (AP) — Hubert Green was shooting for his 13th tour victory in the 13th edition of the Hawaiian Open golf tournament Sunday and he got lucky on the Waialae Country Club's 13th hole.

Green, who says he's not superstitious, won the top prize money of $50,000 from the $250,000 purse Sunday with a par on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff against Bill Kratzert. He sank a seven-foot putt for a four on the hole, No. 16, while Kratzert missed his par putt from five feet.

"I'm not superstitous, but I was aware of the 13s and wasn't sure what it would mean," Green said afterward.

"I think the biggest turning point came on the 13th hole, when I hit a couple of bad shots, but then sunk a 35-foot putt for a birdie. I wasn't sure I deserved it."

Green took the lead in the second round and held it until falling into a tie with Kratzert late in the final round. He had a 71 Sunday, his worst round of the tourney, finishing at 274, 14-under-par over the 7,234-yard, par-72 Waialae course.

Kratzert, who joined the tour less than two years ago, shot a final-round 68 to force the playoff. He won $28,500.

Kratzert has won twice on the tour, taking the Hartford Open last year, and teaming with Woody Blackburn to capture the World National Team Play title.

Green and Kratzert are close friends, and the former said he had to play Jekyll-and-Hyde when the two went into overtime.

"You have to get up a hate for him when you're in a playoff," said Green. "You've got to concentrate enough to get up a grudge."

Green's edge in experience over Kratzert was probably the deciding factor in the playoff. They both hit into bunkers on the final hole, then hit good shots from the sand. But Kratzert, who said he felt the pressure, appeared to hesitate when he took the club back on his putt and missed the cup.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East

Opening lead: Four of ♡.

North's two-club rebid was the initiation of the Stayman Convention. When North subsequently raised South's spade bid to three, South, having a minimum hand, declined the invitatio to go on to game.

Let's suppose that you had been sitting in the East seat. After winning the opening lead with the ace of hearts, let's say that you had made up your mind to lead a diamond. Which diamond would you lead? I imagine that it would be the eight-spot, for the "book" says that when you lead from a worthless doubleton, you should lead the top card. At the table, however, East elected to lead the diamond four at trick two.

Declarer won the trick with the ace, after which he entered dummy via the heart king. He then played the deuce of spades, and East climbed right up with his ace. East now played back the diamond eight — and declarer reflected.

He finally came to the conclusion that East's original diamond holding had been either the Q-8-4 or the Q-9-8-4. Why else would East have led the four initially? So, being convinced that East possessed the diamond queen, declarer played low from the South hand. West won with the queen, and fired back his remaining diamond, which East ruffed. In time, west's king of trumps took the setting trick.

Had East made the standard play at trick two of leading the eight of diamonds, declarer, in all probability, would have fulfilled his contract. When, three tricks later, East would lead his four of diamonds, declarer would conclude that east had started with the doubleton 8-4. Declarer would capture the trick with the king of diamonds, and would next lead another trump, West taking his king. With the adversely held trumps now removed from circulation, declarer's only loser from here in would be a diamond to West's queen.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A.H. HUNTER

Harry stepped out of his car. "I know I'm twenty minutes late, but traffic was terrible," he declared. "I could only average three quarters the usual speed that I'd figured on doing."

"I knew there'd be a good reason." Jean smiled. "And anyway it's a 60 kilometre drive, so you didn't do too badly."

How long had he taken?

(Answer tomorrow)

Friday's answer: Bill would have taken 3 hours 20 minutes.

Ex-Journalist Cassidy Surprise NDP Winner

TORONTO (CP) — Michael Cassidy, who fought what most observers said was a losing battle during the Ontario NDP leadership campaign, won a surprise victory Sunday and immediately had to deal with at least one bitter caucus member.

The 40-year-old MPP for Ottawa Centre, a former journalist, succeeded Stephen Lewis when he won the second ballot with 980 votes.

Ian Deans, NDP house leader for seven years, finished second with 807 votes and Michael Breaugh, MPP for Oshawa, was third. Breaugh was dropped after he got 499 votes on the first ballot.

After the final vote, Deans, member of the legislature for Hamilton-Wentworth, asked the convention for the traditional unanimous vote for the new leader.

Deans, front-runner earlier in the campaign, fell from favor under the painstaking campaign machine assembled by Cassidy's supporters. On the first ballot, Cassidy had a 52-vote edge.

The new leader fought on economic issues, and backed his ideology with a finely-honed organization that gained much support during the three-day convention.

Afterwards, Deans spoke bitterly of the campaign, saying he lost because the support from organized labor never occurred.

Don't ask me why they didn't turn out," he said.

Deans also announced his intention to step down from the post of house leader, saying only that "I was Stephen Lewis's house leader."

An exuberant Cassidy said he expects to be able to handle the divisions produced within the party by the campaign.

All caucus members pledged to support the winner, he said.

But he really had not worked out a set of immediate priorities.

He said he wants to work to develop a closer relationship with the trade union movement, whose representatives he wants to meet with during the next few weeks.

"I have strong support from labor. Both the rank and file and the heavies were ready to work with any of us if we were elected leader."

Cassidy also stressed economic issues, his strong point in the legislature.

"We've shifted our focus to talk about the number one issue," he told a news conference.

He backed the economic policies approved by delegates, including one that would have an NDP government nationalize most major resource companies.

He said the party should gain credibility on economic stands and pledged there would be no pussyfooting on such questions.

"We're going to speak clearly and decisively on where we stand. The party is saying we're prepared to lose a few marginal hangers-on . . . in favor of more votes from working people."

$500,000 Price On Paish's Land

VANCOUVER (CP) — Howard Paish offered to sell his Spatsizi guiding territory to the provincial government for $560,000 in 1976 but at a public inquiry he described this price as a "horse trading position."

Paish, who has not yet been able to sell his territory, also told the inquiry that he spent $200,000 to $250,000 more than his purchase price on start-up costs in 1974 and 1975.

He was testifying at the inquiry into the issuing of guide outfitter licences since Jan. 1, 1975. The Sierra Club has alleged that Paish had a dubious relationship with some members of the fish and wildlife branch and that there were irregularities in the issuing of his guide outfitter licence and certificate.

Paish, questioned by commission lawyer Ace Henderson for the first time since the inquiry started Jan. 9, said he was in Europe in December, 1975 when he learned that the Spatsizi area, in northwestern British Columbia, had been created a park.

He said that was the day he decided to try to sell the territory to the government because he "felt strongly there should be no private holdings in provincial parks," and added that he was prepared to take a financial loss on the sale.

He agreed his lawyers had offered the property to the government for $560,000 as "fair market value before it became park."

Paish said his start-up costs were "trail improvements, flying, helicopters, wages, horses, equipment and promotion," and were larger than expected.

He said he wanted to recoup these costs in his sale to the government because the government had changed the rules on him by creating the park.

Judge J. L. McCarthy, who is conducting the inquiry, asked how the rules had changed when Paish had been assured that the government would continue to honor his guide outfitter certificate.

"Because there was a sharp decline in the level of harvest that would be permitted," he said. "My potential income was cut in half by the quotas."

Paish said he felt that a fish and wildlife branch investigation into his hunting business had become "an invasion of privacy" when he learned that questions were being asked about his relationship with his wife.

He said he also was concerned by allegations that his 13-year- old son had been photographed holding a shot eagle.

"I knew first-hand there was no possible way that this could have occurred and I was upset that a kid's name was being bandied around," said Paish.

Rec Centre Passes

NANAIMO (CP) — Voters in the Nanaimo Regional District approved Saturday a two-mill tax increase for the city's $6.5-million Beban Park recreation centre.

The plebiscite failed 3,605 to 3,443 when it was first put to the electorate Nov. 19 but on Saturday 57.22 per cent of those who voted were in favor of the levy which will raise an additional $440,000 a year.

On Saturday, the voter turnout climbed to 43 per cent from 26 per cent in the earlier vote. The two-mill increase to a total of five mills was approved 6,843 to 5,116.

Row Halts Classes

TRAIL (CP) — School officials have told students at schools in the Trail and Rossland areas to stay home today because of a labor dispute.

Students also were told Sunday to go to their schools Tuesday to pick up assignments.

Officials said schools will be closed because of a labor dispute between the school board and the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

The union, representing maintenance and custodial workers, has said it is unhappy with the progress of negotiations for a 1977-78 contract and said its members would withdraw their services today.

A spokesman for the Trail school board denied that progress has been slow, and said that it takes time to study the 68 demands the union wants included in the new contract.

The union has been without a contract since July 1, 1977.

Stroll Canada In Just One Day

VANCOUVER (CP) — People will be able to stroll through Canada in less than a day without leaving Stanley Park in Vancouver, says the organizers of Canada Week, June 25 to July 1.

"We're dividing the park into regions and inviting the public to walk through them," Norma Sharp, British Columbia Canada Week committee chairman, said during a meeting of the national Canada Week committee.

Exactly what the committee is doing, such as how the park will be divided the cost and the actual date of the event, are still in the planning stages.

She expects 100,000 to 150,000 people to attend, based on the popularity of last year's Canada Get-Together at Brockton Point.

"Last year we found people really wanted something like that," she said.

Sharp is worried about the amount of apathy in B.C. towards Canadian unity, but "I think we can overcome this apathy . . . people are becoming aware that we have to devote ourselves to the concept of one Canada."

Levesque Glad Firms Leaving

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Quebec Premier Rene Levesque says the flight of business from his province is a promising trend because it avoids what he termed blackmail by outsiders who ignore the needs of the French-speaking majority.

Levesque, in the current issue of Time magazine, said that, although the flight of business is worrisome now, in the long run it "is a promising trend."

"I'm talking about people who, under a federal system, can come in from the outside, pick up our savings and ignore the majority around them," he said.

"As long as we are under the present setup, we're exposed to blackmail by those bastards, and we're exposed to destabilizing intentions."

Wallpaper Woes? Try Double-Cutting

By A.J. HAND
Copyright 1978, Popular Science.

Double-cutting is a repair technique every homeowner should know. Today we'll see how to use it to repair holes in wallpaper. But it can also repair veneers, laminated countertops and sheet flooring.

It's called double-cutting because it simultaneously cuts a repair patch and the recess for that patch. Here's how it works:

Start by cutting out a rough patch of wallpaper from a piece that matches the damaged paper on your wall. This rough patch should be large enough to overlap the damaged area by at least an inch all the way around.

Hold this rough patch against the wall, over the damage, and align it so it blends into the pattern (if any) of the paper on the wall. Now fasten the rough patch in place with masking tape. Be sure to use masking tape, not some other type, or you may not be able to remove the tape later without tearing the wallpaper.

In fact, it's a good idea to apply some of the tape you'll use to a scrap of wallpaper, then peel it off. If it damages the paper, forget about using tape. Use thumbtacks instead.

When the rough patch is fastened in place you are ready to double cut. Do your cutting with a sharp utility knife like the one shown in the sketch, or with a single-edge razor blade. In either case the blade must be perfectly sharp or your patch will be less than perfect.

Guiding the blade with a steel straight edge, cut the finished patch out of the rough patch as show in the sketch. While you are cutting the finished patch, you will also be cutting through the wallpaper behind it. This will cut the recess into which you will paste the finished patch.

Caution: When making these cuts, be sure to hold the knife perpendicular to the wall. If the blade becomes dulled by a plaster surface behind the paper, replace the blade and lighten up a bit on your cutting pressure.

Now remove the rough patch from the wall, being careful not to tear the paper on the wall as you peel off the tape. The finished patch should drop out of the rough patch. If not, place the rough patch on a scrap of wood and carefully cut the finished patch free.

Next take your blade and retrace your cuts on the damaged section of the wall, just to make sure they go all the way through the wallpaper. Slip your blade under the edge of the cut area and try to peel it away. If it won't peel off, work all round the edges of the cut piece, then scrape it off the wall. Be sure to remove all traces of the paper or any lumps of paste.

Now you are ready to place the finished patch in place. If the paper is of the prepasted type, wet it with water. Shake off the excess. If your patch requires adhesive, brush it on to the back of the patch. Brush from the centre out to the edges.

Place the top edge of the patch into position in its recess. Pat it down lightly with your fingers and check the edge again for proper alignment. When it's lined up right just let the rest of the patch fall into place. Press with a clean, slightly damp sponge.

That's it. Check the patch again in a few minutes. Sometimes it will curl up slightly at the corners. If it does, press again with the sponge. This time it should stay put.

Note: Double-cutting works best on holes over two inches across, and on foil-faced or vinyl papers.

How to Protect Your Brainchild

You've invented a gadget to end all gadgets. Maybe you've come up with an intricate industrial design or an outstanding trade mark.

It could be that you've written the great Canadian novel.

Now you want to protect your brainchild by patent, registration or copyright.

What must you do?

Until recently your next move would have been to get your application down to the Bureau of Intellectual Property (BIP) in the Department of Consumers and Corporate Affairs at Ottawa, as quickly as possible, Jim Robinson told me.

Now however, you can put that application through a regional office of the BIP, opened last month in the federal consumers and corporate affairs department at 1007 Fort.

This doesn't mean the application is processed here. It still must go from this regional office to Ottawa to be checked and granted.

What it does mean is that the date on which you file here goes with your application and is recorded — instead of the date it arrives in Ottawa.

That gives the applicant extended protection. Robinson explained, and in the case of a patent, might even establish priority for an invention.

"It brings Ottawa down to the local level," he said, "and makes central government more accessible to the public . . . and that is important in a country as large as ours."

Robinson is a BIP technical officer working out of the federal capital. He travels back and forth across Canada conducting intellectual property clinics and providing guidance, assistance, and information.

The day I met him he was in Victoria briefly to take a look at the new regional office, and he stopped long enough to give me a rundown on the difference between a patent, a registration, a trademark and a copyright.

A patent, he said, "is a grant by the government of Canada giving an inventor the right to exclude others from making, using or selling his invention in Canada."

Then he added "it should be made clear an invention is any new and useful process, machine, manufacture or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement to such things."

An industrial design, on the other hand, is any original shape, pattern or ornamentation applied to an article of manufacture "such as the shape of a table, the pattern of a fabric, or the decoration on the handles of a spoon."

Here, the articles themselves must be made by an industrial process.

A trademark is a word, symbol, picture "or a combination of these" used to distinguish the wares or services of a person or organization from those of others in the market place.

Copyright — the right to copy — means that an author is the only person who may copy his "work", or permit someone else to do so. This includes publishing, producing, reproducing and performing.

It applies to all original literary, dramatic, musical and artistic works "including, among others, books, writings, musical works, sculpture, paintings, photographs, motion picture films, dictionaries and encyclopedias, also to mechanical contrivances such as records, cassettes and tapes."

Robinson explained that a patent is effective for 17 years from the date it is issued; industrial design registration lasts for an initial period of five years from date of registration and may be renewed for up to five years.

"Generally speaking," he said, "copyright in Canada exists for the life of the author and 50 years following his or her death."

He also pointed out that drawings must accompany an application for industrial design registration, and that it is not mandatory to register a trade mark.

However, it is advisable to do so, he suggested. "For a registered trade mark is prime facia evidence of ownership of the mark and is more easily protected than an unregistered trade mark."

Booklets that present questions and answers regarding patients, industrial designs, trade marks and copyright have been issued by the Bureau of Intellectual Property and are available through the recently opened regional office at 1007 Fort.

DRUGGISTS TRY TO HELP

WINNIPEG (CP) — Bill Appel, immediate past-president of the American Pharmaceutical Association, says pharmacists should be allowed to prescribe medication for some patients.

Appel said in an interview before addressing the Manitoba Pharmaceutical Association conference Friday that many physicians are overloaded with patients and for certain drugs the pharmacist could take care of the problem.

He said pharmacists should be allowed to prescribe, for short-term needs, antibiotics for flu symptoms, pain relief pills and certain types of sedatives.

Appel stressed it would only be short-term relief for physicians and if the patient's problems persisted, the patient would be request to see a doctor.

"I'm not saying we should replace the doctors," he said. "But the pharmacist is the most educated and under-utilized professional we have. He should be used in concert with the medical profession to improve patient care."

By MICHAEL LAMM

Dear Mike: After years of driving conventional cars, I bought a used 1972 Ford pickup. Unfortunately it drives like a truck. Can I add power steering? I'd also like to install a cruise control and air conditioning. The pickup has the 250-cid Six and automatic. — ADDING ON

Dear Adding: You CAN add all those things. Power steering will cost between $200 and $500, depending on who installs it and where he gets parts. You can also put on an aftermaket cruise control for about $100 and air for $350-$600. The question then becomes, is it more economical to swap your present pickup for a newer one that already has these accessories? I'd say yes.

Dear Mike: When warmed up, the engine in my 1968 Corvair makes a terrible rattling noise at a certain rpm. If I rev the engine higher or lower, the rattle goes away. What causes this noise? — RATTLER

Dear Rattler: Could be piston slap, and if so it's nothing to worry about unless you hear it at all speeds. Or possibly one of the bearings in your belt pulleys are worn. Remove your fanbelt briefly and see if the rattle goes away.

Dear Mike: What makes the alternator on our 1971 Electra whine? The whine increases in loudness as the engine speeds up. I don't believe it's the bearing, because a bad bearing would growl. What do you say? —WHINEY

Dear Whiney: I feel it IS a bad bearing. Most alternators have needle bearings up front and ball bearings in the rear of the case. Try spinning your pulley by hand to test for looseness.

Dear Mike: A few weeks ago a reader wrote you to say he had a bad breake squeal in his 1972 Nova. You answered that he might try blowing out the drums and discs. This would get rid of the asbestos dust and might cure the squeal temporarily. You failed to mention, though, that asbestos dust can be extremely harmful; that it can cause lung cancer. Please be sure to caution your readers — and especially the brakeshop people among them — that they should always wear protective masks and follow safety precautions when working with asbestos dust. High-pressure blowers with vacuum return lines are now available. These keep the dust from going into the shop's ventilation system; also protect people in the more immediate vicinity. Anyway, blowing out brakes can be dangerous, and I feel you ought to make that clear to your readers. — CAL HEALTH

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: If someone had told me this could happen to me I never would have believed it. After six years of marriage (no children by choice), my wife and I got mixed up in a wife-husband swapping deal.

This other couple, who are about our age, weren't happy with each other, and the woman was attracted to me and the man liked my wife, so we went along with the swapping idea just for the fun of it. We had never done anything like that in our lives and thought it would be a good learning experience.

After three months of swapping, my wife left me to move into this man's apartment. His wife had no place to live, so I let her move in with me, but there is no sex between us, I give you my word. (There WAS some at first, but it didn't last long.) All we do is talk about my wife and her husband and wait for them to come to their senses.

It's been five months, and my wife is still living with this man. She says she loves me, but isn't ready to come home yet.

How much longer should I give her? I feel like a fool. We're both school teachers and I'm tired of lying and hiding the truth. — SORRY SWAPPER.

DEAR SORRY: Although neither of you is a "saint," let St. Valentine's Day be the deadline. (If she's still giving you the "not ready" line, the marriage is dead.)

DEAR ABBY: Your response to NON-SMOKER should be burned! You apparently live in some ivory tower where smokers respect the rights of non-smokers in elevators, restaurants and confined public places. Come out of your tower, Abby, and smell the smoke!

I live in a large apartment building with "NO SMOKING" signs in the elevators, but the smokers smoke anyway. It does no good to remind them that it's against New York City law to smoke in elevators. They do not extinguish their cigarettes

Anyone who says that most smokers will quickly douse their cigarettes when someone complains obviously doesn't live in New York City. — SMOKED OUT.

DEAR SMOKED OUT: You're right, I don't. But please don't tar all New York nicotine users with the same brush.

Wife Swapping Deal Stuck: Now He Wants His Back

DEAR ABBY: Your response to NON-SMOKER should be burned! You apparently live in some ivory tower where smokers respect the rights of non-smokers in elevators, restaurants and confined public places. Come out of your tower, Abby, and smell the smoke!

DEAR SMOKED OUT: You're right, I don't. But please don't tar all New York nicotine users with the same brush.

DEAR ABBY: A pastor in our community gave much aid and comfort to the family of a person who recently died. The deceased had no connection with this pastor or his congregation, but as a favor to us he performed the burial services anyway, and did a magnificent job.

How can we properly acknowledge our appreciation to this pastor? We don't want to insult him by offering him money, but we happen to know that most pastors are not nearly as well off financially as most people think

DEAR NAMELESS: Since the pastor acted as a "favor" to you, send him a letter of appreciation and enclose a cheque made out to him for services rendered. If he returns it, make a contribution to his church.

Edging makes shelves look heavier

Imaginative Use of Closet

By PAULINE GRAVES

The need for space is always with us. In the remodelling of older homes, usually removal of walls to make several small rooms into one that is large takes priority over other projects. Custom houses feature open plans with several rooms flowing together. Development houses often combine living and dining rooms.

In existing houses opportunities for expansion are present, if one has the imagination to seek them. Such was the case in the room pictured here, by interior designer Carole Eichen. Only three of the four bedrooms in the house were needed for sleeping, leaving an extra room available as a den. It was the smallest room, of course, complete with closet. The closet, 26 inches deep, and the length of the room, provided the room's expansion, when the doors were removed and the closet opened up to the room.

Although this has been done before, usually the resulting alcove has housed a built-in desk which fills the depth completely and diminishes the feeling of space. In this room, shelves fill the alcove, but only to a 10-inch depth, and they are open to a white wall behind, which, contrasting with the surrounding wallpaper, creates an illusion of space. The free standing desk and accompanying chair are the room's focal point and the shelves behind them are background, not obviously occupying a recess. The wide 1"x2" shelf front edgings become a nice pattern and are in scale with the furniture pieces.

GARDENING

Miniatures Worth the Care

With a minimum of indoor space for growing plants it is still possible to have a continuing interest though in most cases more than usual care is needed for success.

Minimum space in this situation is a three-inch wide window sill and a half dozen thimble-size containers. Stretch the size to include the tiniest 1-inch clay "thumb" pots if you can find them, and inch-wide caps from spice bottles and various other containers.

Before considering the kind of plants to grow in such small containers we need to realize that the smaller they are, the more quickly will the soil mixture become dry. According to the type of plants grown and the size of container, some will need a few drops of water three times daily.

And this is one form of gardening where a very weak fertilizer solution will be required every two months; an avocado or a citrus fruit plant, both naturally 20 to 30 foot trees, may be kept to miniature size without fertilizer for much longer periods.

Careful nipping back of both the roots and the top growth of these woody plants is as necessary as in bonsai work. The art can be studied from illustrations in books on the subject, available from public libraries.

Soil is so small in quantity, that it must be prepared by screening. Use old leafmould rubbed through a fine wire sieve; mix with a quarter of its bulk (same quantity as of soil) of fine sand.

A compromise may be needed, but there must be humus to hold moisture as well as fine sand. With so small quantities of soil few plants will live long, but the scheme is one of interest.

Some of the easier miniatures are found among cactus seedlings. Careful reduction of existing roots may be necessary; use sharp scissors to make clean cuts. The roots should have been kept dry for a period before handling. New roots will be made in the little pots if they too are kept dry for a couple of weeks and warm. They can then be given a few drops of water.

A small leaved ivy will grow for several months in a tiny container. Nip out growing tips to retain size yet allowing for a new leaf or two. Moss from a shady garden will fill a thimble neatly with its own deep soil topped with bright green growth. This is interesting to study with hand lens as it develops.

Sedums of small size can perhaps be acquired from a friend — just a couple of jelly-bean-like sections fill a miniature container — and root readily if partly submerged in the dry sand and soil mix.

As with pots of larger sizes, there must be a one-eighth inch space left at the surface of a one-inch deep container. This is so that water will not wash the soil away form the roots when watering.

With some plants when established, it will be possible to dip the pots into tepid water to soak the contents. Others will need to be watered with a medicine dropper at the edge of the container.

To have the plants for enjoyment without so frequent watering attention, try standing the miniature pots in a group in fine sand at the bottom of a small aquarium or fish bowl. There will be less evaporation. A clear plastic film cover over the opening for a few hours a day would reduce watering to once daily in place of three times.

These thoughts are just playing around with an idea. Some of you may like to work out small plantings in miniature containers for your own or others' pleasure. Small children can learn much without getting spines of cacti in fingers and folks with limited hand movement will appreciate the visual interest of plants on a small scale close by.

Windmill Shows the Way

TVIND, Denmark (AP) — A windmill believed to be the world's biggest—almost 53 metres (175 feet)—is nearing completion on the Jutland west coast and soon the wind blowing in from the North Sea will set in motion its huge three-blade rotor and generate electricity.

Teams of largely unpaid volunteers have labored for more than 2½ years to build the mill and set an example of private, independent efforts to exploit an alternative energy source.

Virtually everything about the mill is unusual, but so are the people who launched and financed the project—the teachers of three private experimental schools that are seeking alternatives in education and are run more or less like a commune.

The windmill is to provide electric power, heating and hot water for the schools set up on the land of an old farm. They house 700 to 800 students and teachers in a sprawling complex of buildings.

The $750,000-$800,000 project was financed out of the salaries of the 100 teachers; the brawn plus a good deal of brains were supplied by young volunteers of all trades who, under the periodical guidance of two civil engineers, worked for board, lodging and pocket money.

"With at least 300 windy days a year, the estimated annual output of our mill will be about four million kilowatt hours, or the equivalent of about 450 tons (about 3,050 barrels) of oil used at a traditional power plant," said Amdi Petersen, leader of the Tvind schools.

"In fact, we figure with an excess capacity of about 50,000 kilowatt hours per month and hope to sell it to commercial power companies."

Petersen said the schools expected to save $60,000 to $70,000 annually on their electricity and heating bills at current prices. This would recover the costs of building the mill in a dozen years and the mill's expected lifetime is 30-40 years, he said.

He also suggested that 1,100 windmills of the Tvind size could replace one nuclear power plant of the size of 4.2 billion kilowatt hours annually, tentatively planned for Denmark. In his calculation the windmills would be considerably cheaper.

Eva Vestergaard, chief information officer of the project, said the only thing holding up the first trial run is official approval of the safety system of the computer-controlled wind mill.

Each rotor weighs nearly five tons. At the specified maximum of 40 revolutions per minute the rotor tip velocity will be about 416 kilometres per hour (260 miles an hour,) and the Danish Academy of Technical Sciences warned that a broken rotor tip could fly more than three kilometres.

Newfie Stamps Top Stars

LONDON (CP) — Rare Newfoundland stamps were the stars of an auction Friday which yielded £89,000 ($180,000).

The top price of £10,500 ($21,000) went for a 1927 De Pinedo 60-cent stamp, portraying King Henry VII, who granted a charter to John Cabot to discover new lands.

Court Site Dangerous To Health

VANCOUVER (CP) — A report by the city's permits and licensing department says in effect that a family court building is a danger to public health.

The report's 18 recommendations from the fire department, the building department, the health department, the electrical department and the plumbing department all point to one thing — the building at 2625 Yale needs work, and soon.

Graham Patrick, vice-chairman of Vancouver city council's family court committee, said the report released Friday "backed up everything — and more — that we've put forward to city council."

Patrick said that at least three times the $17,000 the provincial government has allocated to improve the building is needed.

The committee was briefed Friday on how the provincial government plans to improve and eventually replace the family court building.

Patrick said the provincial authorities they met with "agreed with us fully, but there's no money."

He said the report notes: lack of fire exit signs, lack of heat detectors, the need for a complete upgrading of the fire alarm system, better staff washroom facilities, proper ventilation and emergency lighting.

"City council could cancel the lease (on the building) or give the government a period of time to attend to everything on this report," he said.

Hugh Gaffney, regional manager of court services for the attorney-general's department, said the $17,000 will be used to fix the plumbing, put on some new paint and do other improvements.

He added that the British Columbia Building Corp. is checking possible sites in central Vancouver and will have some recommendations in a few weeks.

"If it was a commercial building, it would've been closed down long ago," Patrick said.

Computer Tracks Police

Located in the police dispatch centre the computer helps to prepare a report each month for police executives and commissioners.

The system has enabled police to discover that 90 per cent of the time it takes an average of 11 minutes for a patrol car to arrive at a trouble spot following an emergency call.

The computer has shown that police arrive at the scene of an emergency an average of 14 minutes after the call is received on a Monday. The same type of call takes 10 minutes on a Sunday.

It takes officers an average of 121 minutes to investigate an injury traffic accident and 55 minutes to handle a non-injury accident.

N. Korean Ruler's Son Assassination Victim?

TOKYO (AP) — Kim Jung Il, son of North Korean President Kim Il-sung and political heir apparent, is believed to have been the target of an assassination attempt last fall and is in a deep coma, the Japan Times said today.

The newspaper, quoting informed sources, said young Kim, 37, suffered head injuries in mid-September in what the newspaper said was disguised as a hit-and-run traffic accident. Since then, the politician has not made any public appearances, the newspaper said.

There was no immediate confirmation of the report. But a similar account was published Feb. 2 in Tong-il Ilso, the newspaper of a pro-South Korea association of Koreans living in Japan.

The report said Kim's assailants were believed to be a small group of North Korean military officers, all deputies to the former head of the armed forces' political department, Li Yong Mu. The once-powerful Mu is known to have lost his post in October, 1977.

The Japan Times quoted sources as saying North Korean agents recently made secret contacts with "top Japanese medical experts" in Tokyo to sound out the possibility of the experts visiting Pyongyang to look at "a son of a VIP (very important person) who has been in a deep coma for more than two months as a result of a traffic accident."

Carnival 'Normal'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Carnival staggered onward today toward Mardi Gras and Mayor Moon Landreiu said this year's festivities were just like the good old days — before a plague of penniless young wanderers took over in recent years.

"We are getting back to normal," Landrieu said.

For Carnival, the two-week spree before Mardi Gras, normal means packed hotels, crowded bars, busy restaurants and hard-drinking swarms in the French Quarter.

On the great day itself — Feb. 7, which falls on Tuesday — normal means a million people packed along parade routes for one final fling before Ash Wednesday signals the beginning of Lent.

LARRY FLYNT

COLUMBUS — Larry Flynt, a prime purveyor of pornography, says he has always thought of himself as Christ-like, but now he has a new set of morals and intends to expose the "hypocrisies and inconsistencies in modern-day religion."

A year ago this week, Flynt was pleading his U.S. constitutional rights of freedom of expression before a Cincinnati jury that convicted him on obscenity charges.

"Even without God, I was right on the principles that I stood for," said Flynt, 34. "Now with God, it's so much fun being saved."

Flynt's religious experience came while he was travelling in his pink jet aircraft, he said. And it came after several personal visits with evangelist Ruth Carter Stapleton, President Carter's sister, in Columbus and at her North Carolina home. He recently bought a weekly newspaper in Plains, Ga., Carter's home town.

Flynt claims he and his wife, Althea, have been "celibate" since the experience three months ago.

Skeptics say the former publisher, now just owner, of Hustler magazine proclaimed his conversion last November in an effort to avoid his seven-to 25-year jail sentence and $11,000 fine for pandering obscenity and engaging in organized crime.

ARMY'S HERO REALLY HEROINE

CHILPANCINGO, Mexico. — An 85-year-old hero of the 1910 Mexican revolution has turned out, after serving 66 years in the army, to be a heroine.

Amelia Robles was already the mother of a young girl when she voluntarily joined the rebellion against dictator Porfiro Diaz at 19 years, changing her name to the masculine Amelio.

DENVER, Colo. — Richard Schwartz and Susan Ellor wanted to do something different. So they did.

The two were married Saturday aboard Continental Airlines Flight 935 en route from Miami to Denver.

Schwartz, a Dade County judge, and Ellor, a court reporter, were married 20 minutes after takeoff in the DC-10 jetliner's pub.

HIGHLAND PARK, Ill. — Bergen Evans, who built a career as an authority on the uses and abuses of the English language, has died in a hospital after a prolonged illness.

The 73-year-old professor emeritus of English at Northwestern University was known to millions in the early days of television as host of such shows as The Last Word and Down You Go.

He also wrote the questions for The $64,000 Question and The $64,000 Challenge, TV shows of the late 1950s that were popular before they were investigated on charges of rigging.

KARACHI — Norwegian explorer Thor Heyerdahl sailed into Pakistan during the weekend after completing 10 weeks of a "voyage to nowhere" aboard a replica of an ancient Sumerian reed boat.

Heyerdahl and his 11-man crew, including two Americans, said they will remain on the Indian subcontinent for about a week before attempting to sail across the Indian and Pacific Oceans toward South America.

Troops Burn Homes

PRAGUE (Reuter) — A Czechoslovak reporter who visited the Vietnamese side of the border battleground in the conflict with Cambodia today described scenes of death and destruction, with scores of burned-out houses and ravaged rice crops.

A correspondent for Rude Pravo, the Communist party daily newspaper, reported that Vietnamese forces virtually wiped out five Cambodian battalions last month in a retaliatory strike after a Cambodian attack caused civilian deaths and destroyed homes.

Following a tour of the border area west of Ho Chi Minh city, formerly Saigon, he described "burned-out houses with the remains of pottery and, as far as the eye could see, the charred heaps of burned rice" in the village of Ba Den.

"After an attack by five Cambodian battalions on Jan. 13 to 19, a total of 120 houses out of 180 were burned down, 27 Vietnamese civilians were killed and more than 40 injured," he wrote.

He added that as a retaliatory measure on Jan. 19, Vietnamese troops inflicted more than 1,000 casualties on the Cambodians and "five battalions were practically annihilated."

Fish Sale Push

OTTAWA (CP) — Fish exporting companies and trade department officials are stepping up their efforts to find new overseas markets for fish products.

The companies are in the final stages of creating the Canadian Association of Fish Exporters (CAFE), Ken Campbell, manager of the Fisheries Council, said last week.

The trade department is in the process of designating fish attaches for Japan and European countries, Bob Merner, head of the department's fish division, added.

But fish markets go in six-year cycles and "we need to put things into place now to avoid the sort of problems which have hit the industry in the past," Merner said. The way to do it is to create permanent markets for Canadian products.

Campbell said that the couple of hundred exporting companies now are joining CAFE, which will be a sister organization to the Fisheries Council. The association should be formally launched in a month or two.

Fisheries department officials say the exporters are taking on a big job in trying to consolidate their marketing efforts and it's likely small companies, which export highly-processed products, won't join.

It will take at least a year to tell whether the association will be able to survive internationally but it won't be for a lack of help from the trade department, one fisheries official said.

CAFE is expected to supply the Canadian companies with constant reliable information on international fish markets and prices. Because the association will be able to get products from the member companies, "the volume will hopefully create a continuity of supply" needed for major contracts, especially with the state trading companies of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Merner says Trade Minister Jack Horner is studying a proposal to appoint people from the fishing industry as fisheries attaches in major overseas markets.

Commercial officers in 40 countries now are responsible for this job. After the 200-mile limit became law last year, the government appointed fisheries representatives in several countries.

Merner said the next low cycle in fisheries will likely be in 1982-83 and the department would like to see the marketing system well enough arranged to protect the Canadian industry.

Drapeau Eyeing 1984 Olympics

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau says Montreal might seek the 1984 Olympic Games if the International Olympic Committee (IOC) should decide to turn down a bid by Los Angeles.

"I wouldn't want anyone to think that Los Angeles is not a proper candidate for the games," Drapeau said Sunday in a television interview.

"But if, after it meets in April to examine the Los Angeles dossier, the IOC decides to extend the bidding period, not only Montreal, but all interested cities could bid for the games."

Drapeau said he could "hardly be against the idea of having the games here twice" since he had spent 13 years promoting Montreal's candidacy for the 1976 Games.

He said the 1984 Games would be a "most profitable venture" for Montreal, since the city already has the facilities. It would take as little as three years to organize the games here.

But he pointed out that Los Angeles — the only city being considered forthe 1984 Games — is well prepared for the event since it already has a stadium. Montreal had to build a stadium at a cost of $900 million.

The mayor added that Los Angeles will also have the advantage of being allowed to house athletes in university dormitories, while Montreal was required by the IOC to build special living quarters. These now are being converted into apartments.

Snowstorms Again Batter Eastern U.S.

Times News Services

NEW YORK — A wind-driven snowstorm hit the middle Atlantic and Northeast United States today, closing schools, slowing traffic to a crawl and disrupting life for millions. The storm was the second for the area in 17 days.

The snow began during the night and as much as 15 centimetres was piled up in some areas by the middle of the morning.

Accumulations of up to 50 centimetres were predicted for parts of the region, with winds of 65 kilometres (40 miles) an hour and higher gusts creating hazardous drifts.

Court and legislative sessions were cancelled; airport runways were blocked; schools and some public offices and businesses were closed. Roads generally were reported passable but slippery during the morning. Authorities lowered speed limits and urged people to avoid driving if at all possible.

Commuter trains and buses bringing hundreds of thousands of workers to Manhattan from Long Island and suburbs in Westchester County, Connecticut and New Jersey reported serious delays. In Boston, the peak snowfall was expected to coincide with the evening rush hour and officials said they might ask businesses to send people home early.

Meanwhile, a Pacific storm drenched Southern California and at least five persons died in traffic accidents caused by rain and mudslides. Forecasters predicted further showers through the week.

Two low-pressure systems — one off the Carolina coast, the other in the Appalachians — were blamed for the snow in the East. Unlike the January storm, the current round of snow was predicted in advance and authorities took precautions. The New York City sanitation department put 1,250 men on the streets — 10 times the number normally on duty each day — but a spokesman said the new storm would "be a rough one to fight" because equipment is in bad shape.

By 10 a.m., up to 15 centimetres of snow had fallen in the New York metropolitan

Chronically Ill Won't be Billed

Chronically ill patients who occupy acute-care beds will not be forced to pay their own bills, a ministry of health official said today.

Reports from the Vancouver General Hospital to this effect were incorrect, said Dr. Chapin Key, executive director of health programs.

Jim Fair, administrator of the Victoria General Hospital, said at the rate of $149 per day, about $200,000 has been paid by the provincial government to cover unpaid bills in 1976.

He said the hospital's social services department becomes involved at an early stage when it becomes apparent that a patient will have difficulty finding accommodation.

"It would be immoral, irresponsible and detrimental to their future existence," Fair said, to worry patients and relatives who cannot afford to pay.

He said some provinces, like Ontario, make municipalities financially responsible in such situations.

Dr. A.C. Pickles, administrator of the Royal Jubilee Hospital, said the provincial grant given to cover unpaid bills in 1976 amounted to more than $327,000.

"The extension of the long-term care program on Jan. 1 has meant that there are more people on the waiting list," he said.

While notification of cut-off has been in effect for at least 10 or 11 years, Pickles said it is always a traumatic experience for patients and their families when they are told they are legally responsible

Developer To Go Ahead

The huge Kingsview Properties housing development near Duncan has been delayed but will go ahead "quite soon," a company spokesman said today.

Syd Welsh, board chairman of Premier Cablevision and a director of Kingsview, said a delay was necessary but the 1,200-lot housing project will go ahead.

"We have too much invested to abandon the project," he said. "It will be completed, there is no question about it."

He said Kingsview will complete the project within the terms of its land use contract with North Cowichan which does not expire until 1982.

Work on installing services to the 1,200 lots began in 1974 but was halted in November, 1977, when it was about 95 per cent completed.

The project is to include up to 200 townhouses and apartment units as well as 1,200 single-family homes.

It is believed that a weak real estate market in the Duncan area was a factor in the delay.

Rusty Autos To Be Named

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will publish the names of automobiles that rust the fastest in a series of advertisements next fall, says Don Murphy of Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada.

He said the campaign will give the names of automobile models that do not comply with a federal anti-corrosion code announced last month.

The code requires 1978 automobiles to remain free of surface rust for one year and from rust holes in the body for three years. The time limits for rust will be increased, beginning with 1981 models, to 18 months and five years, respectively.

Murphy said rust information will come from consumer complaints and monitoring programs in Toronto and Montreal by the Canadian Automobile Association.

"In mid-April, we'll be advertising for owners of 1978 cars whose automobiles have gone through a full winter and experienced rust problems to let us know," said Murphy.

'N-Satellite Hole' Proves to be Empty

EDMONTON (CP) — There is nothing lying under a debris-filled crater in the ice of the Thelon River, thought to be caused by a falling nuclear-powered Soviet satellite two weeks ago.

A press briefing at Canadian Forces Base Namao was told today that recovery teams have removed several pieces of tubing from the three-metre wide crater but there was nothing under the ice.

Geoff Knight of the Atomic Energy Control Board of Canada said the pieces of tubing were obviously not large enough to have created the large crater on the river but officials can only speculate as to what may have caused the impact point.

He declined to say what the speculation is but the lack of any findings below the ice make it more important for officials to check out a half-dozen other sources of radioactivity.

NO DATE SLATED FOR TEL'S RETURN

Negotiators for the British Columbia Telephone Co. and the Telecommunications Workers Union entered the fourth day of talks today on a back-to-work agreement to end their 75-day strike-lockout.

Doug Booth, union vice-president, said Sunday in Vancouver that talks were going slowly and he could not estimate when the agreement would be signed.

Company spokesman Keith Matthews said it was unfair to suggest talks were going slowly because federal mediator Mike Collins had never applied a time element to them. Matthews also said there should be no speculation about the possible date for a return to work.

Jobless Plan Line Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Downtown Eastside Residents' Association is calling for thousands of unemployed people in Vancouver to apply for job openings at the same place and time in order to demonstrate the severity of Canada's unemployment situation.

In a letter to British Columbia and Canadian labor organizations, association president Bruce Eriksen suggests that several thousand unemployed people in Vancouver go to city hall and demand interviews for any job posted or leave their names and addresses for potential employment.

The plan would put pressure on the federal and provincial governments to provide jobs, Eriksen said in an interview Friday.

The action could be done on a daily basis by applying at any Vancouver firm which advertises job vacancies, he said.

"We have to make the unemployed visible and I don't see any better way to do so," he said.

Sadat, Carter Pledge Efforts

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Carter and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat have agreed to make "unremitting efforts" to facilitate resumption of direct peace talks between Israel and Egypt.

In a statement issued Sunday at the end of two days of talks, the two leaders said U.S. Assistant State Secretary Alfred Atherton would shuttle between Cairo and Jerusalem to work toward a "declaration of principles" on a settlement between the two countries.

The Carter administration hopes such a declaration can overcome the talks' present impasse over the Palestinian question and the future of the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

Egypt withdrew its foreign minister from the talks shortly after they opened in Jerusalem, accusing Israel of intransigence and an inflexible bargaining stance. The two countries have since resumed parallel security talks on questions surrounding an Israeli pullback from the Sinai desert.

Sadat was sombre as he answered questions on what appeared to have been a difficult series of meetings with Carter at Camp David, the presidential retreat in the Maryland mountains.

Canadians Didn't Want Job

An American was hired as new president of the Insurance Corp. of British Columbia because there is a lack of suitable executives in Canada, the minister responsible for the Crown corporation said Sunday.

Pat McGeer said that although the consulting firm Price Waterhouse made a thorough search for a Canadian, Canada does not have many large insurance companies with executives with the necessary experience.

Canadians who were approached were not interested, he added.

McGeer announced Jan. 25 that Robbie Sherrell had been chosen president, to start March 1. Sherrell now works in London, England.

He reiterated Sunday that immigration problems will not prevent Sherrell from starting as scheduled.

McGeer agreed that ICBC did not list the job opening with Canada Manpower until after Sherrell had been hired at a salary of $80,000 a year, but said he does not think the regulation should apply to top executive positions.

Immigration officials have said they want ICBC to prove that it was unable to hire a Canadian for the job, and have said Sherrell will not get a work permit without such proof.

The Victoria chapter of the Committee for an Independent Canada, meanwhile, has thrown its support behind federal immigration authorities in the Sherrell case.

The CIC group also sent a letter to McGeer stating that by appointing Sherrell to the ICBC post the minister has broken a federal law.

Cahill said a regulation passed last year makes it illegal for a foreigner to be appointed to a position in Canada as long as there is a Canadian available for the job.

Union Boss To Quit

Victoria Firefighters Union head Ross Cameron will be leaving labor ranks in the near future to take a job with the provincial government.

Cameron confirmed today that he intends to leave his position with the unionbut would say little beyond that.

"I'm not entirely sure of the scope of this new job, it has to do with labor-management relations, but I expect to get involved in other fields as well," he said.

Cameron said that he would make a statement on his new position after meetings to finalize the appointment Tuesday morning.

And in another move, Victoria land commissioner Ken Wilkins confirmed today he plans to leave his $28,000 city hall post.

He declined to say why, or where he's going.

Wilkins said he's leaving his job as land commissioner, but met all other questions with a firm "no comment".

Teens Held After Break-In

The trio had taken liquor and chocolate bars.

Saanich police patrolling the area checked the pavilion and arrested a 17-year-old and two juveniles aged 15 and 16.

Little Time Left To Save B.C. Underwater Life

Times Staff

The scuba diver waved his arm in the direction of Bentinck Island, near Pedder Bay.

"There used to be ling cod, rock cod, octopi and many other forms of sea life down there," he said.

"It used to be a joy exploring the sea bottom. Then somehow the word got around it was a wonderful place for a swim.

"You should see the area now. Some irresponsible group cleaned up and the sea life has been wiped out."

That kind of complaint, rare 10 years ago, is now common and it is for this reason that Betty Pratt-Johnson of Vancouver, scuba diver and writer, has launched a campaign to establish underwater parks in B.C.

"We have got to get provincial and federal governmentauthorities to establish underwater parks before it's too late," she says.

"We have got to protect areas rich in sea life from spearfishing, collectors and chemical effluents."

Pratt-Johnson, who was in Victoria to drum up support for parks beneath the sea, said she is extremely concerned at the damage to sea life caused by chemical pollutants.

In certain areas of Howe Sound, crabs and other forms of sea life are not edible because of mercury poisoning.

"Apart from pollutants, we have to protect our colorful and beautiful underwater habitats from people," she says.

To emphasize her point, she said there are now 2.5 million divers in North America and they are increasing at a rate of 200,000 a year.

This is both good news and bad news.

Increasing numbers of divers can only lead to further spoilage of underwater areas unless steps are taken to set some aside for pure recreation. Spearfishing and collecting would be prohibited in these area.

On the other hand, an increase will bring economic benifits to the province, she added.

"B.C. is becoming more and more widely known for its sea world. It won't be long before large numbers of people come to the coast to dive, especially in winter, and we need tourists in winter."

She said underwater parks would not only serve divers.

"In Japan, towers have been lowered into the sea in order to make the underwaterworld available to people who cannot even swim," she said.

"Sooner or later this this will come to B.C."

Pratt-Johnson said the response to a postcard campaign she waged for undersea parks was good.

The cards were attached to the January issue of Diver magazine, and asked readers what areas they would like to see protected.

She said B.C. Parks Branch director Tom Leehas told her underwater parks could be created instantly if the public indicated it wants them.

"Other countries have established marine parks. They bring tourist dollars. Why can't we do the same thing here?".

Energy Cover Up?

A group of six Vancouver Island environmental organizations today accused the federal government of jeopordizing the West Coast's environment by failing to establish a comprehensive energy policy.

The groups called for a restructuring of the National Energy Board and a resumption of oil port hearings.

In a joint news release the alliance said that the federal government has apparently cancelled the oil ports inquiry being conducted by Dr. Andrew Thompson.

And they charged that Ottawa is attempting a colossal cover-up by now sending the NEB across Canada to study oil supply and demand.

"The cover-up threatens both the coastal environment of B.C. and future energy security for the province," the groups claim

After several months of hearings the Thompson inquiry adjourned indefinitely in December because there were no active proposals to be considered at the time.

The Island groups, the Canadian Society of Environmental Biologists, Bluepeace (Sooke), Cleanshores, Clearwater, C.A.S.E./Bluepeace and the Sierra Club, also called on the federal government to restructure the NEB.

The environmentalists said the board should serve the long-term social, economic and environmental interests of all Canadians.

Seven Oaks' Use Only Temporary

Juvenile offenders occupying the Seven Oaks home for retarded children will likely remain there this week until alternative holding facilities are found, a corrections official said today.

Regional director of corrections W. R. Jack said he realizes the situation runs counter to a promise he made to Blenkinsop Valley residents last fall but said it cannot be helped because of overcrowding in regular confinement facilities.

Neighbors of the Seven Oaks institution near Cordova Bay Road in the Blenkinsop greenbelt area are disturbed by the fact that 11 youngsters and five supervisors from up-island are being housed in cottages comprising part of the Seven Oaks facility.

The cottages are supposed to provide accomodation for patients from the Glendale Hospital.

Juvenile authorities have run out of accommodation at the Greater Victoria juvenile detention home, which has space for 19 inmates.

"The symptom is overcrowding but we haven't determined why," Jack said.

His staff will be interviewing judges and juvenile officers to try to identify the problem, he said.

But there are no alternative facilities available immediately and adult cells — even where they could be used for juvenile holding — are in heavy demand.

Jack said he appreciates the community is upset.

"I made a promise some months ago that I wouldn't use that facility and I've got to live up to that promise," he said.

"I'm going to have to ask their indulgence for at least this week.".

Letters were sent in November by the Saanich Greenbelt Association and the Blenkinsop Valley Ratepayers Association to Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis and Attorney-General Garde Gardom protesting the use of Seven Oaks for juvenile detention.

Neighborhood Council Starts

Saanich council takes the mountain to Mahomet tonight when it holds the first of a series of regular council meetings in various neighborhood centres to encourage community participation in civic affairs.

Furnace Blows Up

Windows shattered and a wall was shifted when the furnace blew up at Parkside Gardens, 3598 Tillicum, at 3:30 a.m. Sunday.

Saanich firemen estimated repairs would cost between $4,000 and $5,000 in the small, separate furnace room to which the explosion was confined.

Chief Harold Gains said it appeared an electrode of the firing mechanism failed in the twin-boiler hot water heating plant, allowing raw vaporized fuel oil to fill combustion chambers.

The Miracle Of Flight . . .

Miracle will be moved from the pool at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel to her new holding tank at Sealand by helicopter, Sealand manager Angus Matthews said on the weekend.

The helicopter transfer means the whale will be disturbed for only about eight minutes, five of them airborne, in comparison with transportation by truck which would take at least an hour and require a crane at each end.

Miracle probably will be the first whale to be moved by helicopter. A Los Angeles aquarium has considered using one and is expected to send an observer to see how the airlift works.

Miracle's last medical was more than a month ago. Matthews says there were no problems then and her behavior indicates a stable condition.

Her 380,000-gallon holdig tank next to Haida's is nearing completion and a made-to-measure sling will be made for the helicopter airlift.

Too Late For Flu This Year

However, the bug will probably show up bright and early next flu season, Arneil said today.

Arneil said scientists are working on a vaccine that should minimize the danger of severe attacks by that time.

Experts worried when the influenza appeared in Russia last year after a 30-year absence because there is no known vaccine to fight it. The virus spread to central China and the United States but so far has not been reported in Canada.

Meanwhile, Victoria residents seem to be recovering from a bout of the Texas flu.

Absenteeism is down to five per cent in some schools compared with a rate of around 12 per cent last month.

MAYOR STUDIES AMBULANCE ISSUE

Communication Blamed

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said today he now believes the difficulties surrounding the provision of ambulance service in the municipality mainly stem from a "communication problem" which he is taking steps to resolve.

The comment appeared to reflect a softening of the mayor's earlier stand on the matter.

Last week he said that criticism of the Saanich municipal ambulance service by the provincial government's emergency health services commission (EHSC) was unwarranted.

The EHSC, which is scheduled to assume responsibility for ambulance service to Saanich residents April 1, had cited an incident last week in which a Saanich crew responded to a suicide call in the same building as the provincial agency's Burnside station, without notifying station personnel.

The suicide report turned out to be a false alarm.

Couvelier said today that he and Ald. Robert Cameron, chairman of Saanich council's fire and emergency committee, spent several hours Saturday monitoring the provincial emergency operation and talking with supervisory personnel.

Couvelier said they gleaned considerable background information and he was "impressed with the integrity of EHSC personnel and their operation."

"I really see it as a communication problem," he added. "We will have to follow this up to see how we can improve co-ordination."

As a first step, he and Cameron met this afternoon with Saanich fire department officials.

Meanwhile, Esquimalt Ald. Colin Blair said Saturday that Saanich should be allowed to retain responsibility for providing ambulance service to its residents, and the provincial ambulances "should be moved elsewhere."

He said whatever the outcome of the tussle between Saanich and the province as to which agency should provide the service, "it is blatantly obvious overlapping of services is inevitable."

To overcome the problem, he said, the provincial service should be removed from Saanich and relocated to an area where it would provide a primary rather than a secondary service.

WOMAN HURT HELPING DOG

Going to the aid of an injured dog cost 20-year-old Marilyn Lukey a broken knee, broken ankle and possible concussion when she was struck by a car on Burnside Saturday night at 6:20.

Saanich police said the woman, of 885 Craigflower, helped the dog which had just been struck by another car and was kneeling in the street at the intersection of Milgrove. The driver stood by and tried to wave down an oncoming car.

The second car, driven by Daniel Richard Gross, 17, of 913 Rankin, avoided the first car but struck Lukey.

She was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital where her condition today is good.

Atop the Spar, a Winged Mercury

WE WERE POKING about on the Sechelt Peninsula last week when I spotted a friend from long ago. It soared out of an area of smashed and trampled greenery — a full-rigged wooden spar tree with a logging donkey-engine huffing and puffing in its shadow.

In today's highly-mechanized woods, a natural spar tree is a sight so rare that I'd never thought to look on one again. It's quite a few years now since the Madill steel spar, truck-mounted, took over the job of elevating the blunt noses of the incoming logs above the slash.

I drove on, pleased to know that the art of rigging a spar-tree has not vanished from the earth, and that at least one practising highrigger still plies his spectacular trade.

There were more dangerous jobs than high-rigging on the railway logging shows of my youth. Train brakemen, squirreling along the peaked and swaying log-loads on breakneck curves, lived on borrowed time. And for a loader, the margin between life and death among the flying logs was always narrow.

Even so, a glamor attached itself to the high-rigger. He was a special person, a man apart, to whom legends accrued. It was his job to fashion a carefully-selected tree into a spar, to hang the rigging on it, and to service it while it remained in use.

Prospective spar trees were chosen with an eye to location when the grades for the logging railway branches and spurs were laid out.

The tree selected was marked with an 'X' chopped into its bark, a sign to the incoming falling sets that it was to be spared. In due time, the highrigger would come out from camp with his climbing belt and spurs, his short-handled axe and his one-man crosscut saw, and take the tree in hand.

Once in my years as waterboy to the gods, I happened along a newly-laid grade on fire patrol to find Larson, the camp highrigger, addressing himself to an 'X'-marked tree.

He flipped his wire-cored climbing rope around the trunk, secured it to his belt with a rigger's hitch, then started up with axe and saw dangling from their beltlines.

It looked easy. But, watching him hitch his way up the tall, straight column of the trunk, I knew from misguided climbing experiments of my own how brutally the strain came on arms and legs.

Arrived at the first limb, 90 feet or thereabouts up, Larson disappeared from sight. I could hear his axe woodpeckering away; presently a massive limb floated out and down.

He lined up his axe and began with deliberate strokes to chop out his undercut.

Much could go wrong. The top could split, crushing him in his climbing rope. Or it could kick back from its elevated stump and wipe him off the spar. There was also the moment when the severed top let go, and the man clinging below his cut was whipped savagely to and fro.

It was a virtuoso performance. To it, he added something more . . . a signature flourish. He slipped his rope, clambered to the flat-sawed top of the spar, and unsupported in space, proceeded to stage a show.

He became the discus thrower, then Napoleon with hand thrust inside his jacket and one foot advanced. And finally, winged Mercury, balanced with an arm and a leg extended in an attitude of flight. All this for an audience of a few deep-woods ravens, and one pop-eyed, properly worshipful boy on the grade below.

I found an excuse to drive back to that Sechelt spar-tree, hoping the rigger would ride up on the pass-line to swing the blocks. But he didn't; and even if he had, I doubt he'd have treated us to a winged Mercury.

Bob Finds Joy In Final Shot

Bob Burrows, playing with a badly-puffed eye suffered the previous night, sank a foul shot with no time left on the clock to give DataTech an 84-83 decision Sunday after the Victoria club opened with a 106-99 triumph Saturday.

The Sunday game was topsy-turvy the whole way. DataTech was down 16 points in the first 10 minutes of play but came back to take a 42-41 lead at half time. Then Yakima pulled away again in the early part of the second half and was ahead 79-68 with just under five minutes left on the clock.

Burrows, who didn't play the final half of the game Saturday after being taken to hospital for treatment of an elbow-inflicted cut under his left eye, scored 16 points before being sidelined and contributed 15 to the DataTech offence Sunday.

Yakima, down 12 points with less than five minutes to go Saturday, started hitting from the outside but failed to get the equalizer before time ran out.

DataTech had a 60 per cent shooting effort Saturday.

Ken Shields, who also had a great game defensively, and Mike Gains led the Victoria attack Sunday with 16 points each while Brian MacKenzie also hit for double figures with 12.

Gordie Hoshal (8), Dave Mulcahy (7), Brent Mullin (6) and Jim Duddridge (4) competed the scoring.

Borton led Yakima Sunday with 26 points and Stan Nybo contributed 19.

On Saturday, MacKenzie and Duddridge were the top marksmen with 21 points apiece while Mulcahy chipped in 18 and Hoshal hit for double figures with 11.

The two wins give DataTech a 7-9 record for the season with only two league games remaining. The Victoria club finishes off at home to the Equitable Falcons, Feb. 17 and 18.

Next weekend, DataTech will compete in the annual Renton invitational tournament.

BAYS EDGE AUSSIES IN KELOWNA FINALE

KELOWNA — Oak Bay Bays nipped Bulleen-Templestowe of Australia 66-65 Saturday to win their third Western Canada high school boys' basketball tournament in five years.

Ken Kirzinger, who was later voted the most valuable player and selected to the all-star team, led Bays in the final with 27 points while Wayne Andrews added 15.

Kelly Dukeshire of Bays was also named to the all-stars, Andrews was picked as a runner-up and clubmate Tih Tan received honorable mention.

The Australian team, an all-star squad from the vicinity of Melbourne, led 30-28 at half time.

Nanaimo Islanders, who lost their first game of the season to the Aussies on Friday night, downed Vancouver College Fighting Irish in the battle for third place.

Chemainus Pulls Out of Basement

CHEMAINUS — Chemainus Blues snapped a tie for last place in the South Island Big Six Hockey League with Juan de Fuca Merchants by downing the latter club 7-2 Saturday at Fuller Lake Arena.

Peter Lemon scored twice to lead Blues, who held period leads of 2-0 and 5-1, and singles were added by Craig Neeser, Jim Kipp, Wade Smith, Rod Hunter and Burt Steen. Brice Charlong and Dale Sanche replied for Merchants.

East Germans Sweep Singles

Second place went to West Germany's Dagmar Lurz, who had finished two places ahead of Poetzsch in the short program and executed a beautiful cross-foot spin in compiling 19 ordinals and 186.10 points.

Third was Elena Vodorezova of the Soviet Union with 39 ordinals and 180.42 points.

Poetzsch, 17, over the three days of ladies competition was inconstent. She won a perfect nine ordinals Thursday in the figures and then placed a low sixth the next day in the short program.

In the free skate Saturday night, she included impressively a butterfly jump, spread-eagle, and a triple salchcow but fell during linking steps 20 seconds before the end of the routine.

Switzerland's Denise Bielmann, 15, won the free skate with an exceptional performance despite the rough ice and was the only girl in the field of 22 to execute four different triple jumps and win the only perfect 6.0.

For the Soviets, who took both the pairs and dance crowns here in a repeat of last year's championships in Helsinki, Vodorezova was the best-placed ever Russian in the ladies singles event.

This year's competition drew renewed heavy criticism of the judges from the press and the public in the 8,000-seat stadium for failure to penalize irregularites in Friday's ice dancing and for generally over-rating the top performers.

Policeman Kayos Bobick

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Kallie Knoetze, an unknown Pretoria policeman, unleashed a smoking right hook Saturday to knock out Duane Bobick of the United States in the third round of a scheduled 10-round heavyweight bout.

A crowd of about 40,000 went wild at Rand Stadium as the underdog Knoetze stopped the American rated No. 5 heavyweight in the world.
